Old and New Orleans.
The Shushan Airport.
Lulu White's Place.
Senator Long's Polecat.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 29.

THIS IS New Orleans, old, beautiful, warm, hospitable, altogether lovely. If there are three wonderful cities in the country, this is one of them. If there are only two, this is one of the two, the other is your home town.

What to see first, the old slave quarters, and Jackson Square with its beautifully built French and Spanish dwellings of ancient times, or the newest, grandest airport, the Shushan airport to be finished in time for Mardi Gras?

Mr. Meigs Frost, sent to meet you by J. Walker Ross, editor of the New Orleans States, ends that uncertainty. First to the Roosevelt Hotel, to be photographed drinking a cup of New Orleans coffee.

If the photograph looks happy, as though you were saying to yourself, "My, this tastes like real coffee," the States will print it; if not, it will not print it.

Drinking New Orleans coffee on your arrival here is as much a matter of course as kissing the black kaaba stone when you land in Mecca.

YOU VISIT the new airport, accompanied by Mr. A. L. Shushan, for whom the air field is named.

Senator Huey P. Long, who to this city is what Mohammed was to Mecca, said:

"Abe did the work, let the airport be named for him."

And it was named for him. Reminds you of Genesis.

The building of that magnificent port for land planes and hydroplanes on what was once an impassable, useless, mosquito breeding cypress swamp at the edge of Lake Ponchartrain, reflects credit on the city and state, on Mr. Shushan, and everybody sharing the work.

Imagine the finest airport that you can imagine, multiply that by ten, and then that's the New Orleans Shushan airport, with its six runways each a mile long, so that you may land in the teeth of any wind.

A magnificent park belonging to the city, adjoining the lake and the airport, will be cut up into building lots and sold to repay the twelve millions that the park and airport cost.

They don't do that in the sophisticated North. There politicians buy the land first, then put in the improvements, at public expense, and they sell the land improved, and keep the profit.

THE MAIN building of the air field impresses you with its beautiful decorations. It has walls and the ceilings made of celotex waste from the sugar cane fields through which you travel later in the day.

Louisiana sugar cane planters are happy. Prices are better and they have had the necessary frost that kills the cane at the bottom, and according to belief, makes the upper part one-third sweeter.

They don't have frosts in Cuba. But here they must replant the cane every three years. Soil and temperature in Cuba make that unnecessary.

THE FIELD for hydroplanes takes you back to old days of flying serpents. The seaplane lands on the water, taxis up to a slanting runway, crawls up that runway, lumbers across the field to mechanics that will overhaul it, and later returns to the water, to take off on its flight.

Millions of years ago huge reptiles came out of that same lake, or crawled up from the swamp, lumbered along the land, and some learned to fly. And their descendants, sea gulls, are sitting in hundreds on the airport now.

ON THE EDGE of the wonderful calm water landing for hydroplanes along the edge of Lake Ponchartrain, which is twenty-three miles square, New Orleans has built a sea wall five and a half miles long, with fourteen steps reaching down to the water, along the entire length of that wall, with salt water bathing free.

Salt water bathing and a great air field, about fifteen minutes by motor from the heart of New Orleans. New York City, which has to go to New Jersey to get a convenient landing field, should think about that.

Aviators fly from Washington, D. C., to a Long Island landing field in two hours, then spend an hour and a half by automobile, through thick traffic, getting to Forty-second street.

Don't fail to go to the New Orleans Mardi Gras celebration this year if you can, and see the magnificent new airport, and wonderful old New Orleans.

A. L. SHUSHAN shows you again the old city that you first saw with Col. Ewing, then editor and owner of the States, now gone to the Heaven where all good editors talk to Horace Greeley, John P. Raymond, Charles A. Dana, Joseph Pulitzer and Joseph Medill.

Col. Ewing's sons own two newspapers in Louisiana. And Abe Shushan, who inherited his father's wholesale drygoods business in Canal street, wants you to know that Shushan is a Jewish name, and he, the father of the big airport, is all Jewish on both sides.

He hasn't changed Shushan to Montmorency, or Vere de Vere, preferring Shushan, which was a good name and successful in Spain when Isabella was queen, and Christopher Columbus, whose uncles and mother were Jews, was starting for America. If Spain had not foolishly driven out the Jews, Spain might have this airport and money to keep it up.

PARK BALKED PLAN, SAYS PROSECUTOR

Defendant's Counsel Attacks Testimony Of Guilty Men

The case of Charles F. E. Fahey went to the jury late this afternoon.

Fahey was accused of embracery—of giving lists to others that they might see jurors—in the "Three Toms" case, which grew out of the raid of the Monaca Club.

Earl R. Jackson, Assistant District Attorney, in his address to the jury, said:

"Fahey, who says he would not fix a juror, attempted to fix the District Attorney. But that didn't work."

Harry A. Estep, defending Fahey, attacking the testimony of two of the witnesses—who had previously pleaded guilty—as the testimony of "two criminals," said:

"My reading of the law is that Fahey, to be guilty of embracery, would have to see a juror personally."

JUDGE DISAGREES

But here Judge James H. Gray interrupted Estep, saying:

"I will instruct the jury differently on that point."

District Attorney Andrew T. Park had testified yesterday against Fahey. Park had personally investigated the case last June, when word was brought to him of an attempt to fix jurors in the Monaca case involving Tom Coyne, Tom (Goose) Goslin and Tom Dolan.

Yesterday Park testified that Fahey, in his office after the arrest, asked Park if he was a friend of Senator James J. Coyne, and asserted he got the jurors' list from Tom Coyne.

On the stand today, Fahey, who had been chief clerk in the State Auditor General's office here, said he had copied the lists himself, and given them to others to see prospective jurors as to whether they were "wet" or "dry". He denied he had urged the others to "fix" the jurors.

Jackson added, in his jury address:

"Fahey said to Park, 'Are you

Long Illness Fatal To Craig, Comedian

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Richy Craig, Jr., vaudevillian of dry humor, sharp wit and easy delivery, has lost his seven-year fight against tuberculosis. He died yesterday at a New York hospital at the age of 31.

Craig, whose recent talking picture "Shorts" have added to his popularity, started his stage career at the age of 17. Two years later he "played the Palace" in New York.

Judge Davis' Widow Claimed by Death

Mrs. Anna Carter Davis, widow of the late L. L. Davis, former judge of Common Pleas Court, died yesterday at her home. She will be buried Friday morning from the residence of her son, Ralph, 5825 Northumberland street.

NURSE DIES IN HOSPITAL PLUNGE

Topples From Roof Of St. Francis Building

Miss Anna Ulrich, 33, a graduate nurse, jumped or fell to her death at 1:30 today from the tenth-story roof garden of St. Francis Hospital.

Her body, shooting past the windows of rooms on lower floors, landed on the lawn of the hospital grounds, facing Calvin street.

Sister M. Laurentine, director of the School of Nursing of St. Francis Hospital, and several graduate nurses rushed to pick her up. They carried her into the school, where she was pronounced dead.

According to Sister Laurentine, Miss Ulrich, a native of Suterville, Pa., had been ill at intervals for several years. She worked yesterday on a private case outside the hospital, but this morning asked to be relieved.

Miss Ulrich's father is a miner at Suterville. Her parents and a married brother, notified by telephone of her death, hurried to the hospital.

At the hospital it was said that Miss Ulrich entered the nurses' training school in 1924, graduating in 1927. Since she has been employed on the nursing staff of the hospital and lived in the Home for Nurses. She made frequent week-end trips to her parents' home in Suterville.

Physicians who examined the body found Miss Ulrich dressed in shoes and hose, undergarments and a bathrobe.

To have fallen from the roof garden she would have had to climb over a four-foot iron-pipe railing.

GOV. RITCHIE DEFIED IN MOB QUIZ

New Attack Feared To Free Four on Way to Hearing

Associated Press.

Another lynching was added today to two which preceded it early this week.

A 19-year-old Negro was taken from jail in St. Joseph, Mo., and hanged from an elm tree to the cries of "string him up" from a crowd of 7,000, including many women.

The week's previous lynchings were those at San Jose, Cal., of two men who had confessed the kidnaping and murder of Brooke Hart.

Echoes of still another lynching were heard from Maryland where efforts were made today to release by habeas corpus proceedings four men arrested by state soldiers yesterday. The four are charged with participating in the lynching of a Negro several weeks ago.

International News Service.

PRINCESS ANNE, Md., Nov. 29.—With the four alleged ringleaders of a mob that lynched a youthful Negro last October en route here, Circuit Judge Robert F. Duer this afternoon defied Attorney General William Preston Lane, Jr., and refused t postpone habeas corpus hearings for the men.

The hearings have been fixed for late today. The men, en route from Baltimore, where they were rushed by national guardsmen, were scheduled to arrive

AUDREY SMITH CLARK

WIDOW FREED IN SLAYING

WOODBURY, N. J., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—The Gloucester County grand jury, which investigated the killing of Sheldon A. Clark, Jr., wealthy Paulsboro resident, failed to indict his widow, Mrs. Audrey Smith Clark, former Broadway dancer, who was charged with slaying him.

Authorities said Mrs. Clark would be released immediately. She is in a Woodbury hospital, recovering from a severe blow on the head which she said was inflicted by her husband with a billiard cue just before he was shot to death.

The widow, who was known to the stage as Audrey Adaire, told authorities that she did not know what happened after she was struck.

Twelve witnesses were heard by the grand jury yesterday, among them one of the Clarks' two children, 6-year-old Sheldon III. He is a grandson of Sheldon Clark, of Barrington, Ill., senior vice president of the Sinclair Oil Company.

42 Commuters Hurt In Crash of Trains

QUINCY, Mass., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Two men were dangerously injured, 40 others less seriously hurt and 150 passengers badly shaken up today as a Boston-bound train crashed into the rear of a second Boston-bound commuters' train in the Atlantic section of Quincy.

Many passengers apparently saved themselves from injury or possible death by leaping from the forward end of the wooden car on the rear of the standing train.

Mine Tipple Blaze Does $15,000 Damage

CHARLEROI, Pa., Nov. 29.—Fire destroyed part of the tipple and all of the conveyor system of the Ontario mine of the Ontario Gas Coal Company at Cokesburg, near here, early today.

The damage was estimated at between $12,000 and $15,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(INS.)—William C. Bullitt, first American Ambassador to Russia since the inception of the Soviet regime, 16 years ago, sailed today to take up his duties.

GOV. PINCHOT SIGNS STORE CONTROL BILL

Liquor Sales Limited Until 1934 to Hotels, Cafes

HARRISBURG, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Pennsylvanians will buy their liquor from state stores after prohibition is junked.

And they will do much of their drinking in hotels, restaurants and clubs licensed by the commonwealth.

In an all-night session, crammed with action, the Legislature enacted the most important parts of Gov. Pinchot's liquor program and left other portions ready for quick action next week.

STORES BILL SIGNED

Gov. Pinchot signed the bill establishing state stores to monopolize bottle and case liquor trade at 11:15 a. m. today, terming it "the best liquor control system in America."

The dry Chief Executive said:

"I sign this bill with genuine satisfaction. In spite of certain defects, it represents the enactment in record time of what I regard as the best liquor control system in America.

"The worst provision in the bill is that which permits clubs to serve liquor over bars. Fortunately efforts in the House to permit sales in clubs on Sunday did not succeed.

"There are other matters in which the bill does not fully meet my views. Nevertheless, every principle of sound liquor regulation and control contained in the bill as first introduced is still in it. Leaders of the House and Senate, sincere wets and sincere drys, are certainly entitled to congratulate themselves on a great achievement."

CONTROL BOARD APPROVED

A measure to create a liquor control board was passed early this morning, and without a moment's delay Gov. Pinchot signed it in his office at the capitol.

A few minutes later the Governor's three appointees to the board were unanimously confirmed by the Senate.

GIRL'S SCREAMS ROUT INTRUDER

The screams of Miss Dorothy Morgan, 20, frightened away a Negro intruder in her bedroom at 425 South Highland avenue early today, according to a police report.

Miss Morgan told police she was awakened by a noise and that, upon flashing on a light, saw a Negro clad in a chauffeur's uniform standing near her bedroom window. She screamed and he fled, she said.

Three young highwaymen seized H. M. Elven, of Ambridge, as he entered a restaurant in the 3500 block Butler street, robbed him of $5 and his watch and then bundled him into his own automobile and imprisoned him in a box car along the Allegheny Valley Railroad tracks early today, according to a police report. Railroad police released him.

John Maries, night manager of a restaurant at 2935 Penn avenue, was held up early today by two thieves who escaped with $10 and a cigaret machine, he reported to police.

Mrs. D. Ring, of Brushton and Frankstown avenues, reported her purse containing $20 was snatched late last night as she was walking in Meade street, near Dallas avenue.

3 FAKE POLICE MURDER MAN

Posing as police, three young men fatally beat a roomer at 303 Ella street, McKees Rocks, early today, and threatened with death the woman proprietor, as they fled.

Andrew Andrejcka, 42, employed at the Pressed Steel Car Company, was asleep in his room, when someone rapped on his door.

When he asked who was there, the reply came:

"McKees Rocks police. You are under arrest."

Andrejcka unbolted the door. The three men beat him with an iron pipe and a blackjack and left him bleeding and semi-conscious on the floor.

As they fled downstairs, Mrs. Mary Mehal, 55, the proprietor, confronted them. Drawing a revolver, one of the three told her:

"Get out of the way, or we'll kill you!"

They escaped out the front door.

Andrejcka told the story of the attack to Dr. C. W. Page. Taken back to the rooming house, he died six hours later. An autopsy revealed a fractured skull and cerebral hemorrhage.

The dying man told Dr. Page, the latter informed the Coroner's office, he knew of no reason for the attack. County detectives and McKees Rocks police are seeking the slayers.

Cowboy of Movies Dies in Auto Crash

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—A motion picture cowboy was killed and seven other persons injured in a traffic crash in which four automobiles were involved early today on the Mint Canyon highway. A blinding snowstorm was blamed.

Roy (Skeeter Bill) Robbins, a film cowboy employed on the Hoot Gibson ranch was killed. Among the injured was Carmen W. (Curly) Fletcher, veteran cowboy and author of the popular cowboy song, "Strawberry Roan" and other ballads of the range.

Rockefeller Cough Halts Trip South

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—An attack of grip, which has left a cough with John D. Rockefeller, Sr., may keep the 94-year-old capitalist away from his winter home in Ormond Beach, Fla., this year for the first time in 30 years.

After an examination by a specialist from Rockefeller Institute, who was called in by John D. Jr., it was said that plans for the Rockefeller hegira from northern snow and cold "hung in the balance" today.

Originally scheduled to leave his Pocantico Hills estate last Monday, Rockefeller's physician has postponed departure because of a seeming inability of the aged capitalist to throw off the cough.

It is Rockefeller's ambition to live to be 100.

ROLPH'S STAND HIT BY PINCHOT

HARRISBURG, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot today said Gov. James Rolph, of California, is "certainly crowding the mourners to refuse a pardon to Tom Mooney and yet champion lynching."

Commenting on Rolph's action in approving the lynching of two kidnapers, the Pennsylvania Governor added:

"The stirring up of race against race and class against class is fiendish business."

Pinchot asserted Rolph's "invitation to lynch law is not well received in Pennsylvania" and said he does not believe it is "well received in California, either."

Pinchot's reference to Mooney, serving a life sentence for the bombing of a Preparedness Day parade in San Francisco, was not enlarged upon.

The Governor continued:

"So long as I am Governor the full power of this commonwealth will be thrown behind the law whenever the constitutional rights of citizens, of whatever group or class, are unlawfully threatened.

"Pennsylvanians are law-abiding. They always stand behind the law. Against every invitation to violence, I urge them to keep their heads."

Wilstach, Compiler Of Similes, Dies

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Frank J. Wilstach, 68, author and assistant to Will Hays in the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, died yesterday.

Astor Widow, Boxer Go on Honeymoon

FIGHT JOB GOES TO M'CLELLAND

Political circles were buzzing today as Pittsburgh's "on ag'in, off ag'in, gone ag'in" boxing commission situation was brought to a head by the reappointment of Dr. W. D. Clelland, Brookline dentist and former Pitt football star, to the office of commisioner, from which he was removed after serving less than four months back in 1931.

Gov. Pinchot first named Dr. McClelland to succeed Havey J. Boyle, local sports editor, to the post and then removed him in favor of Boyle. Now he reverses the procedure a second time. In a statement in Harrisburg the governor said Dr. McClellan's dismissal in 1931 was "through a misunderstanding," and added that he considered him exceptionally well qualified for the office.

County Commissioner C. C. McGovern, who was successful in having Boyle restored as commissioner in 1931 and fought to have him renamed when his latest commission expired on October 22, said he was surprised at the change. He said he had asked the Governor to rename Boyle and knew of no reason why he did not do so.

Blackmail of George V Charged to 'Nephew'

LONDON, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Clarence Guy Gordon Haddon, a middle-aged, well-dressed man, was charged with an attempt to blackmail King George V in Bow Street Police Court today.

Haddon told the Scotland Yard inspector who arrested him:

"I do not see why I should be hounded for being the illegitimate son of the Duke of Clarence."

The Duke of Clarence was the eldest son of King Edward VII, then Prince of Wales, and the title became extinct when he died in 1892.

The specific charge made in court was that Haddon had written a letter "demanding money from the King with menaces and without reasonable or probable cause."

Haddon replied to the charge:

"I deny that. I pleaded for the right to live, as the letters I wrote to the King show."

The hearing was short and was adjourned to December 4 with Haddon remaining in police custody.

The interest was intense, for the case is one of the rarities in which royalty figures in court proceedings. A big crowd besieged the drab building in which so many London prisoners receive their first arraignments.

City Rounds Up 'Cupids' For Grabbing Victims

Police Supt. Franklin T. McQuaide ordered city detectives to arrest men who make a livelihood by steering couples who obtain marriage licenses to aldermen's offices for the ceremony.

McQuaide reported complaints had been received. The last one was received today from a woman who said a man had accosted her and her prospective bridegroom, suggesting he accompany them to an alderman's office without delay. The man became insistent when his proffer was rejected and took her arm as though he were her escort, she complained.

Six detectives were detailed to the roundup task.

DENIES DISPUTE OVER 'SPOILS' OF ELECTION

By HOWARD L. BROWNING
Staff Correspondent.

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 29. — The larger outlines of what Pittsburgh's next administration will be become clearer today as William N. McNair, Democratic Mayor-elect, placidly continued his short vacation.

First of all, there is no dispute over patronage and spoils between McNair and the David Lawrence-Joseph F. Guffey organization.

Dissension may arise in the future, for McNair intends to use his veto power on organization appointments if necessary.

But there is no dissension now, for McNair feels that his object and the organization's object today are the same—to give Pittsburgh the best possible government for the next four years.

WORK IN HARMONY

McNair hasn't yet chosen his cabinet. But, he says:

"I'm not worried about that—if necessary I could step into office tomorrow and get me a good cabinet."

He and the organization will probably work in harmony on that group, with McNair confining himself to approving suggestions—or disapproving them—since other bodies haven't shown serious indication of making independent suggestions.

He expects to leave the selection of minor employes and bureau heads to department heads although he'll look with favor on graded tax law advocates and other exponents of his ideas.

NO PAY FOR CABINET!

But there'll be no normal cabinet appointments until the city can pay their salaries and McNair's not sure the city'll have the money. He said:

"If I have to, I'll get some good men to take the jobs for three months or so without pay. If there isn't money in the treasury, I'm not going to spend it.

"That's why I want the city to set the millage before the middle of December—then we can send out tax bills the first of January."

But most important of all, to McNair's mind, is that the new administration will be progressive, humane, liberal. As he puts it:

"It's going to be a government by discussion. If somebody criticizes me, we'll debate the question. There's not a thing I say that I can't back up.

"For instance, if the Communists start gunning for me, we'll go out and debate and I'll show them they're all wrong.

"Sure, they can meet and march when I'm Mayor."

McNair's keenly interested in the reaction of the general public to his ideas—and a little disappointed that it has been so slow to grasp the advantages of his proposed revisions of the graded tax law.

HE MEANS THE LOBBY

That's where we come to the little matter of the desk in the first floor lobby of the City-County Building. McNair wants to be accessible and to keep in touch with the public. He says:

"I mean it. I'm going to be at my desk in the lobby every morning from 8:30 to 9:30 and anybody that wants to can see me there while I open my mail."

McNair's not going to silence his wise cracks and he didn't come south for anything but a rest for his wife and to cure the right hand that was shaken sore after election. Mrs. McNair and the hand are better.

And George E. Evans, ardent single-taxer, who is traveling with the party, isn't the official silencer. To prove it, McNair says:

"Doesn't George like my ideas? Don't we both talk the same way?"

And they do. Evans is a sincere convert of McNair's free-port-for Pittsburgh idea by which Democracy's apostle hopes to tease the Chamber of Commerce to distraction. And they both sit back and chortle as McNair says:

"Gee, won't President Roosevelt laugh if the old high-tariff Chamber of Commerce goes to Washington and asks for a free port?"

CITY PAYROLL STUDY STARTED

Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, appointed representative for Mayor-elect William N. McNair at the city budget sessions, has begun the work of sifting the city payroll.

City department and bureau heads have been summoned and have been appearing before Mrs. Smith at her new office in City Hall, where they are being asked to supply names, salaries and duties of various city employes.

The information is being given, it is reported, and as a result there is much excitement at City Hall. Assisting Mrs. Smith in the check-up of conditions back of the figures in the city budget is M. C. Conick, auditor for Main & Co., who was active in the investigations in the city supplies department.

The 1934 city budget is now at the printers and will be available for City Council soon.

SETTLE STRIKE AT STOCKYARDS

CHICAGO, Nov. 29. — (AP.)— The strike of approximately 8,000 workmen at the Union Stockyards was settled early today, at least temporarily, when the employer organization agreed to a 10 per cent wage increase, pend ? further negotiations.

Within a few minutes after the agreement was reached, pickets were withdrawn and the strikers started back to their jobs.

A parley, beginning at midnight last night, arranged by Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago and chairman of the Chicago Regional Board of the NRA, brought about the agreement, which was regarded as a partial victory for the stockyard workers, who had demanded a return to the 1929 wage scale, an increase of about 50 per cent over the pay they have been getting in recent months.

3,000 Jobs to Be Given Unemployed in County

Civil Works Payroll Boost Due During Week

More than 3,000 unemployed men will be given civil works jobs this week in Allegheny County and projects calling for 117 additional workers will be in Harrisburg before another day. County Civil Works Administrator James L. Stuart reported these developments today when he announced an intensive effort is being made to place the CWA projects in districts particularly hard hit by the depression.

These districts, he said, include Coraopolis, Stowe Township, Duquesne, Carnegie, Heidelberg, Crafton, Homestead, Braddock and McKeesport.

George P. Mills, director of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board, said that all men on the city's work relief program are being investigated, and, if not relief cases, they will not be certified for transfer to the Civil Works program. There are 1,400 men on the city emergency payroll.

CITY TO BUY SUPPLIES

At a special meeting of City Council Friday an ordinance will be presented authorizing the city to purchase material and supplies to be used on CWA projects in the city.

Projects approved and submitted to State Administrator Eric Biddle were announced for Clairton, including two sewer programs and paving; Edgewood, park improvement, and Sewickley, a new water line. These jobs will employ 117 men.

Biddle yesterday approved projects providing employment for 2,589 men. Approval of other projects now before him would bring this total to 3,280, it was reported at the Pittsburgh headquarters.

First appointment from the relief rolls of the county will be made within the next 24 hours by H. F. Bucher, director of the Federal-State Employment office, 108 Smithfield street.

Projects to give work to 532 additional men were to be considered at a conference this afternoon between County Administrator Stuart and the County Commissioners.

County Engineer E. L. Schmidt is to present plans for constructing the Natrona Heights road in Harrison Township, on which 372 men would be employed.

Schmidt also was to ask for two surveys, one employing 16 men on the Wayman Baptist road, and the other employing 24 men on the Ohio River boulevard from Haysville to the Beaver County line.

MINERS TO GET WORK

W. S. Brotzman, weather forecaster, yesterday asked the County Commissioners for about 40 persons to assist him for three months on classifying marine observations.

More than 1,200 coal miners will be given work scaling hundreds of disused coal mines which have been draining into the Ohio River watershed.

Senator Davis Hits Roosevelt Critics

That was the statement today of Senator James J. Davis, Pennsylvania Republican and former Secretary of Labor, visiting here.

VOTERS REVOLT AGAINST LONG

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Senator Huey Long was faced today with open revolt by voters who protested against an attempt to place a Long-picked candidate ina vacant Congressional seat.

Even while Long was making an uproarious appearance before a Senate investigating committee here, citizens in the Sixth Congressional District took steps to oppose the "Kingfish," their action culminating in a mass meeting in Baton Rouge last night where speakers called for "an overthrow of Hitlerism in Louisiana."

The protesting citizens obtained a court order to halt a special election set for next Tuesday, at which Mrs. Bolivar E. Kemp, the Long candidate, was slated for an unopposed election. The group also called an election for December 27 to nominate a representative by popular vote, announcing that all candidates would have until December 8 to file their candidacies.

N. Y. HIERARCHY CONSIDERS BAN ON COUGHLIN

Radio Priest's Attack On Smith Stirs Controversy

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Further speeches by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit's radio priest, in this territory may be opposed by the diocesan authorities of the Roman Catholic church as a result of the sharp controversy that has broken out between Father Coughlin and former Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

The question of any further public appearances of Father Coughlin in New York will be up to Cardinal Hayes, it was indicated today. No comment was forthcoming from the Cardinal's office, however.

ATTACK CRITICIZED

But, nevertheless, in Catholic circles the clash between Father Coughlin and Smith—a prominent Catholic layman—was arousing considerable discussion. Msgr. Thomas G. Carroll, chancellor of the Roman Catholic archidiocese, of New York, characterized Father Coughlin's attack on Smith in his Monday night speech at the Hippodrome as "absolutely unwarranted."

Smith did not resent Father Coughlin's action in coming to New York and taking issue with him on the nation's money policy, but he did object, most strenuously, to Father Coughlin linking him with J. P. Morgan & Co.

In a prepared statement Smith denounced as "absolutely false" the story told here by Father Coughlin in an interview that Smith, accompanied by two bishops, had visited the offices of Morgan to arrange an "immense loan for the Empire State Building."

From boyhood, Smith asserted, he was taught that a Catholic priest "was under the divine injunction to 'teach all nations' the words of God." He added:

"That includes the divine commandment, 'Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.'"

PRIEST RAPS COUGHLIN

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—The Rev. John L. Belford, pastor of the Roman Catholic Church of the Nativity, today termed the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, "radio priest" of Royal Oak, Mich., an "infernal nuisance" and expressed the belief that the Apostolic Delegate from the Vatican would be forced to stop the radio priest's "wild ranting that is a disgrace to the church."

Father Belford, a monsignor, noted for many years as an outspoken leader in connection with Brooklyn's church and civic affairs, added:

"The man is an infernal nuisance. He has gone mad with popularity.

"He is a public enemy; a very dangerous man. Anyone who makes it his business to cater to the mob can do great harm.

"He is using his church as a soap box to exploit himself and he has won an enormous following. His talks are not religious but political and purely selfish."

COUGHLIN FIRM

DETROIT, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Terming the reverberations from his address on President Roosevelt's monetary policies as a "tempest in the teapot," the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin today said his remarks relative to Alfred E. Smith "appear to have been distorted by some people who wish to draw a herring across the path of Mr. Smith's unfortunate statements opposing the President."

The militant priest declared:

"Still, I am not hedging at all. Bishop Gallagher (the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, Roman Catholic bishop of Detroit) knows that I have ample proof to substantiate what I said. This morning over the telephone he permitted me to make the above statement."

Bishop Gallagher today characterized as "not worthy of comment" the statement of the Rev. John L. Belford, Brooklyn priest, that Bishop Gallagher "has it in his power" to stop the addresses of Father Coughlin. The bishop said:

"Msgr. Belford's statement is not worthy of comment."

ROOSEVELT'S DOLLAR POLICY REAFFIRMED

Government Finance Program Occupies Washington

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 29. —(AP.)—President Roosevelt is going on with his objective for a commodity dollar, it was re-emphasized today at the "Little White House" in making plain that no particular significance is attached here to the visit of Gov. Black, of the Federal Reserve board.

It was made plain that Mr. Roosevelt is going along toward his objective without change but as conditions dictate. In other words, the President does not regard daily actions on the gold purchase program as significant.

He was pictured as amused at stories which deducted significance from the rise in the price of gold or from the failure of the government to boost the price.

As for the visit of Gov. Black, it was stated in behalf of the President that before he left Washington Mr. Black said he was coming to his home at Atlanta for Thanksgiving and an invitation was then extended for him to come here.

GOVERNMENT FINANCING

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Treasury chieftains view the administration money program through the perspective of government financing needs today and the immediate outlook was a continuation of gold buying and routine cash borrowings.

No difficulty was foreseen by Acting Secretary Morgenthau and his aides in refunding December 15 maturities of $727,000,000 despite a softening of the bond market coincident with the newest R.F.C. gold price.

After holding the RFC offer for newly-mined gold at $33.76 for a week, it was moved to $33.85 yesterday and another 8 cents was added today for a total increase of 17 cents.

Morgenthau, who leaves town tonight for the week-end, said no gold price will be set tomorrow as the Treasury will be closed for the Thanksgiving holiday.

Asked to comment on reports of an administration plan to peg the dollar temporarily at between $5.25 and $5.35 with the English pound, he shook his head in the negative. He was asked:

"Does that mean no such plan is being considered?"

He replied:

"That means I have no comment."

JURY GETS VOTE FRAUD CASE

The Federal Court jury in the government's third vote fraud trial retired to deliberate at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon.

Judge F. P. Schoonmaker charged the jury following addresses by Sebastian C. Pugliese for the defense and Special Prosecutor Earl F. Reed for the government.

The four defendants, members of the election board of the First District, Third Ward, are charged with violating the vote laws at the November election last year.

The defendants are Joseph S. Gagliardino, judge; Dominick Mastrianni and Ralph Scanga, inspectors, and Ralph Gentile, clerk, of the board.

NRA Code Held Peril To Freedom of Press

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—The American Newspaper Publishers' Association today had a legal opinion holding the freedom of the press in jeopardy if newspapers sign an NRA code that does not contain a specific bill of rights proviso.

The opinion, designed as an answer to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, was given to Col. R. R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, by the law firm of Kirkland, Fleming, Green & Martin.

HELEN JACOBS

HELEN JACOBS THREATENED

International News Service.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Miss Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Cal., national women's tennis champion, has received threatening and obscene letters, it was announced at the Federal Building today.

Miss Jacobs planned to confer with United States Attorney Francis J. Ford, and turn the letters over to him for an investigation by the Postal Department.

Miss Jacobs has been making her home with friends in Melrose while she worked on a book and practiced her game daily at the covered courts at Longwood Cricket Club in preparation for tournaments next year in defense of her national tennis crown.

NAZI BOYCOTT ATTACKED HERE

The Allegheny County branch of the German-American Federation last night passed a resolution protesting the boycott of German goods as un-American.

Asserting that Samuel Untermyer and Jewish organizations have declared such a boycott, with the result that American businessmen handling such goods have suffered losses and employes lost jobs because of it, the resolution declares that continuance will mean retaliatory measures. It causes, the statement says, "most undesirable race hatred in our own country."

Reinhard Ullrich, president, and August Buchholtz, secretary, signed the resolution, a copy of which was sent to President Roosevelt and 68 affiliated societies.

Hamper Her 'Home,' Baby Near Death

STEUBENVILLE, O., Nov. 29.—(AP.) — Two-year-old Martha Thomas was treated in a hospital her from death by starvation and here today in an effort to save rickets. She was found with her mother, Lucille Thomas, 33, in an abandoned house.

The mother said her husband died in 1931 and that since then she had been leading a nomadic life in a tent. All of the family's possessions, including cooking utensils, were carried in a hamper on the mother's back.

BANK REFORMS SUGGESTED BY ALDRICH

Would Bar Officers From Investment Connections

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Legislative reforms ranging from mandatory and complete divorcement of investment and commercial banking to restrictions forbidding Reserve member bank officers to participate in stock pools were recommended today by Winthrop W. Aldrich, president of the Chase National Bank.

Testifying before the Senate stock market committee as it prepared to end its investigation of his bank, Aldrich conceded that some "indefensible transactions" had marked banking before the depression, but added:

"Bankers have enough to atone for without being held responsible for orgies of gambling upon stock or commodity exchanges or for the rapacity of individuals who seek to gain inordinate financial profits by reckless speculation.

"I undertake to condone no improper practices, but do suggest that a proper sense of perspective is necessary."

CHANGES PROPOSED

Among the changes he proposed in the 1933 banking act:

A direct or indirect connection with investment banking should disqualify any one from acting as an officer or director of a national or state Federal Reserve member bank, with similar restrictions applying to officership or connection with two commercial banks in the same community.

Executive officers of Reserve member banks and the directors and executive officers of Reserve banks should be forbidden to participate "directly or indirectly in syndicates which are offering securities to the public, or in trading accounts or pool operations in securities which are dealt in publicly.

All executive officers of Reserve member banks should be required to report to their directors their borrowings above a nominal sum from any source (the law requires only reports on loans obtained from other banks).

OUTSIDE INTERESTS

Executive officers should be required to tell Reserve member bank directorates about outside financial interests or incomes.

The term "affiliates" from which member banks must be separated by June 16, 1934, should be so defined as to exclude "corporations or business which shall be controlled by a bank in a fiduciary capacity or control of which shall have been acquired in connection with the salvaging of a bona fide loan.

Member banks should be permitted (1) to continue securities affiliates long enough to liquidate their assets prudently or (2) to take over the assets and hold them until a "prudent disposition" could be made.

New "policy" loans made hereafter to individuals because of a connection with a depositor should be reported to the depositor.

Securities dealers should be forbidden to accept member bank funds for deposit even, as is permissible now, with Federal Reserve Board approval.

FORD SCORES IN NRA ROW

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—For the second time, Comptroller General J. R. McCarl held today that Ford Motor Company products are eligible for government contracts.

This was ruled in an opinion given the Department of Agriculture as the result of an attempt by Hugh S. Johnson, the NRA administrator, to keep the Northwest Motors Company, of Bethesda, Md., a Ford dealer, from receiving a contract for Civilian Conservation Corps trucks.

Johnson contended the company might be in violation of the retail motor code because its b probably was under the minimum set by the code.

McCarl held, however, that this question "is for judicial determination and not for considerat by the purchasing or contract officer in the awarding of a contract."

The decision also developed that Johnson considers that Ford complying with the automobile manufacturers' code "save in respect of certain technical particulars which are considered immaterial."

Man-Made 'Lightning' Ready to Split Atom

International News Service.

ROUND HILL, South Dartmouth, Mass., Nov. 29.—The door was open today for science to unlock the mysteries of the atom, the smallest, yet the mightest particle of matter, so minute as to be infinitesimal, so powerful as to be almost immeasurable.

The medium was 10,000,000 volts of electricity, the highest continuous direct current ever produced by man, and the "big bertha" in the effort of science to bombard the atom and crash through the "outer guard" surrounding the particle, loosing tremendous energy and possibly changing, for instance, copper into gold, or vice versa, lead into platinum, or iron into silver.

The first tests of the electrostatic generator, by which scientists hope to accomplish the feat of "splitting the atom," resulted in production of 7,000,000 volts of continuous, direct current electricity, three times the amount ever before attained by a man-made apparatus.

The tremendous voltage was manifested by brilliant blue flashes of flame, similar to lightning bolts, and deafening "thunder-claps."

The machine was designed by Dr. Robert J. Van der Graaf, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The tests were conducted inside the large dirigible hangar on the estate of Col. E. H. R. Green, and, according to Dr. Van der Graaf, if the operation were conducted out of doors, free from "leakage" to the girders of the hangar, attainment of 10,000,000 volts would be possible.

The purpose of building the huge generator, according to Dr. Van der Graaf, was to attempt the difficult feat of splitting the atom, and discover, if possible, the mysteries of its nucleus, in which 99.9 per cent of all the energy of the universe is locked. All the energy that can be harnessed at present is that other one-tenth of 1 per cent, which is contained in the "outer guard" of the atom.

MONACA FIX CASE TO JURY

a friend of Senator Coyne? It was Tom Coyne who gave these lists to me.'

"It was for these very words that Tom Coyne was indicted. Fahey said not a word today about getting these sheets from Tom Coyne.

"And where is Fahey's wife, before whom he admitted that he gave out the sheets when she came into Park's office. Why didn't she come here and stand back of his story?

"He may be willing to perjure himself, but he isn't going to have his wife do it."

Fahey's side of the Park office story, as he told it today, was:

"I was in his office and asked if I could speak to him privately. Then I asked him if he was a friend of Senator Coyne.

"He said he was, and I asked if I could call him up on the phone."

Park answered, Fahey testified:

"'You wouldn't want to get Coyne here.'

"I asked if I could get in touch with him. Park told me that everything would be all right. I said I was working for the benefit of Tom Coyne."

Estep asked:

"What do you mean?"

Fahey said:

"I knew Tom Coyne for 20 years. I wanted to help him out. I did not tell them to see the jurors and ask them to take care of the case for Coyne."

On cross-examination, Fahey was asked why he asked Park if he knew the Senator, and why he wanted to phone Coyne.

He answered:

"I thought I had better find out if Park was my friend or my enemy, but I wanted to get in touch with Senator Coyne, anyhow."

CHARACTER WITNESSES

Character witnesses were called and the defense rested.

Those testifying to Fahey's good name were the Rev. Francis M. McCarter, Supt. of Police Franklin T. McQuaide, Dr. Henry J. Benz, Charles M. Meloy, John M Tighe, James A. Fortune and Col. James L. Costella.

District Attorney Park was the star witness for the state yesterday. He said that after he had caused Fahey's arrest, and was questioning him in his office, Fahey asked him:

"Aren't you a friend of Senator Coyne?"

To which Park said he replied:

"Friendship has nothing to do with the case of jury fixing."

Park further said:

"I knew Fahey was chief clerk in the auditor general's office, controlled by Senator Coyne, and I knew that he, a stranger to the 'three Toms,' didn't try to 'fix' the jury unless impelled to by someone higher up. I told him he was foolish to 'take the rap' for Tom Coyne and advised him to tell the truth to the court."

The actual approach to the jurors, Park said, was made by Edward Costello, constable of Glenfield. Both Costello and O'Connell pleaded guilty to embracery before the Fahey trial opened yesterday, and took the witness stand for the state. Costello, describing his meeting with Mrs. Anna Schuler, of the jury panel, said he told her:

"If you are called on the Coyne case give him a break and they will take care of you."

M'CREADY, CLEAN-SHAVEN AND SOBER, ASKS FOR 'BREAK'

DENIES TRYING TO GET MONEY FROM CHILD

Sleeps 12 Hours, Quiets Down After Talk With Judge

BULLETIN.

Harrison McCready was apparently of sound mind in June, 1932, County Judge Richard A. Kennedy testified this afternoon. Judge Kennedy was called to tell of McCready's arraignment before him then on a charge of nonsupport, brought by his second wife.

Two witnesses were allowed to testify in Common Pleas Court today that Harrison R. McCready, Fox Chapel playboy, was sober and showed no signs of insanity when, in 1930, he established a trust fund of $150,000 for the benefit of his first wife and child.

The first was Frank Stonecipher, McCready's attorney when the trust was established, who yesterday was not allowed to answer the same question by Judge Frank P. Patterson. The second was C. P. Davis, trust officer of the Union Trust Company, where McCready at the time had a voluntary trust of $423,000 from which the $150,000 in securities were taken.

A third witness was not allowed to answer a similar question when he testified that he had seen McCready only four or five times in as many years, and then only on business. He was J. H. Kunkle, secretary and treasurer of the Title Guarantee Trust Company, who handled real estate affairs for McCready.

SOBERED BY TALK

McCready, meanwhile, sobered by a talk in chambers with Judge Patterson, sat quietly in court as Charles J. Margiotti, his attorney, sought to break the trust. Clean-shaven and, he said, fortified with 12 hours' sleep, he began the day with a plea to newspapermen "for a break." He said:

"The newspapers have been saying I am trying to take $150,000 from my child. That is not true. What I want is to get possession of the money and set aside $25,000 to be used for her education. In the meantime the interest could be accumulated for her benefit."

Margiotti resumed cross-examination of Stonecipher when court opened today. McCready's former attorney said his client told him in 1930 to settle the case by all means. He told me, the attorney said:

"'I do not want it to appear on the public record, nor in the newspapers, that I am an habitual drunkard.'"

The attorney could not recall his use of the term "extortion" to Attorney Oliver K. Eaton, representing the wife and child, while the trust negotiations were in progress.

On direct examination, Eaton asked:

Q.—As a result of your conversation with McCready, and your observation of him, did you see anything to make you believe he was of unsound mind at that time?

A.—I discovered nothing that would lead me to believe that he was of unsound mine.

ANSWER ON RECORDS

Despite strenuous objections from Margiotti, Judge Patterson allowed the answer to remain in the record. Davis then took the stand.

McCready, he testified, has established a voluntary trust for his own benefit with the Union Trust Company, which he could amend at any time. Securities valued at $423,000 were included in this trust. Eaton resumed his questioning.

Q.—When Mr. McCready withdrew $150,000 of these securities to establish the trust fund for his wife, what was his condition?"

A.—He was sober.

Q.—Did you regard him as unsound of mind?

A.—I did not. He appeared perfectly normal.

After Judge Patterson adjourned yesterday's hearing, he called the 27-year-old playboy into his chamber for a few minutes. McCready refused to reveal what the Judge told him, but he did explain:

"I'll have to be careful and be more polite and formal in the court. But you can't blame me for going to sleep and snoring when you listen to all 'hat bosh."

MISSOURI MOB STORMS JAIL, HANGS YOUTH

Torch Applied to Body Of Victim Accused Of Attack

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Lynch law has settled the case of Lloyd Warner, confessed attacker of two women.

The 19-year-old Negro died in flames at the end of a rope last night before the eyes of a mob of 7,000, which battered its way through National Guardsmen and peace officers after a four hour battle to seize him in the Buchanan County jail.

Warner was hanged to an elm tree near the courthouse, drenched with gasoline and set afire. Women and children watched him die. Some were friends of the white girl of 21, who, officers said, Warner attacked in an alleyway here Sunday night.

Terror-stricken and stripped to the waist, he was pulled from a third floor cell by four young members of the mob, beaten, kicked and cursed.

Sheriff Otto Theisen, 60, said:

"I'm a fighting Dutchman, but there are too many Irishmen here for me."

Tear gas fumes, remnant of the defense of 40 city and county officers and the hastily mobilized members of the 35th Tank Company, Missouri National Guard, floated on the stairway down which the Negro was dragged to death.

He was hanged and burned about a block from the jail after impatient members of the throng decided against a plan to lynch him at the scene of the attack, a mile away.

The girl victim of the attack, waylaid on her way home from a motion picture theater, was reported near hysteria. Battered and bruised by her assailant, she was found in the alley tied with her own stockings.

Officers said she was the second woman Warner had attacked. He was accused of attacking a Negro girl six months ago, but there was no prosecution.

The noose was placed on Warner's neck, gasoline obtained from a nearby filling station was hurled upon his trousers and a torch was applied. Later men built a fire beneath the body. The flames burned the rope and the body fell upon the embers.

BODY RECLAIMED

At 1:05 a. m. Fire Chief Leo J. Urbanski drove to the scene and extinguished the fire. The body was taken to an undertaking establishment.

Officers said Warner sought to plead guilty yesterday to the attack charge. Judge J. V. Gaddy, however, directed postponement of the case until today. He said:

"I don't want to rush things."

Gov. Park declined to comment on the lynching.

The jail, wrecked last night, three years ago withstood the assault of a mob seeking Raymond Gunn, a Negro, accusel of the brutal slaying of Velma Colter, a young Maryville, Mo., school teacher.

A few days later, however, Gunn was seized by a crowd on his way from jail to court at Maryville.

He was taken to the frame schoolhouse where Miss Colter was slain, chained to the roof and burned with the building.

GOVERNOR PROTESTS

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Gov. Guy B. Park in a statement today said that "there is no justification" for the lynching last night of Lloyd Warner, Negro, at St. Joseph. He said:

"Mob violence, whether in the punishment of crime or in attempts to obtain alleged civil rights, is always wrong and is destructive of good government.

"To condone such an offense is to encourage lawlessness, deny the efficiency of the courts and the power of constituted authorities."

DR. WYNEKOOP LAYS MURDER TO 'MORON'

Son's Wife Mistreated, Slain by Degenerate Prowler, She Says

BULLETIN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—A true bill charging Dr. Alice L. Wynekoop with the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta, was reported to have been voted by the county grand jury today. Apparently the state had not taken up the case against her son, Earle, held, like her, in County Jail.

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—"I am innocent. I had nothing to do with the murder of my daughter-in-law. Rheta was the victim of a moron."

From her bed in County Jail infirmary, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop made this statement today as a grand jury indictment was sought charging her with the murder of Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, wife of Dr. Alice's son, Earle.

In her statement, made through her attorney, Frank J. Tyrrell, the 62-year-old doctor reverted to her original story to police—that she had found Rheta's almost nude body on her basement operating table at 8:30 last Tuesday night; that her desk had been robbed of $6, and that some intruder was the slayer.

DENOUNCED POLICE

Of the confession she signed admitting having shot Rheta in the back when the latter failed to revive from chloroform administered during medical examination, Dr. Wynekoop declared:

"I gave my confession after 60 hours of questioning by the police. During this time they only offered me one cup of coffee, as far as foods are concerned.

"Rheta was the victim of a moron."

Dr. Wynekoop declared, in substantiation of her statement, that last summer Rheta was held up in the basement office and gave the bandit, a youth, $100 from the doctor's desk. She continued:

"Evidently this young man returned for more money, found Rheta in the basement, then killed her for fear she might identify him later. She was mistreated, indicating the work of a degenerate."

DR. ALICE'S THEORY

Dr. Wynekoop advanced the theory that the intruder had chloroformed Rheta and then had shot her. Of the chloroform, which she admitted in her now repudiated confession that she had administered, she said:

"Nobody with long medical experience would ever burn a person's face with chloroform."

Denouncing the police, Dr. Wynekoop said:

"There has not been a real investigation in the murder of my daughter-in-law, because the Police Department has investigated nothing but my house."

RITCHIE DEFIED BY MOB

here from Baltimore shortly before the hearings.

Reports persisted that a mob was planning to blockade the highway leading into Princess Anne and release the prisoners before the court action, but there was no confirmation.

DELAY REFUSED

The Attorney General, who was manhandled yesterday by the mob which was frustrated in its efforts to free the prisoners, had asked Judge Duer to continue the case until tomorrow morning to permit the taking of testimony by state witnesses.

Judge Duer curtly declined the request.

The four prisoners were started for Princess Anne shortly before noon by Harry C. Martin, warden of Baltimore City Jail.

The men are William H. Thompson, Irving Adkins, William S. McQuay and William P. Hearn. They had been taken to Baltimore yesterday by 300 National Gunardsmen from Salisbury, where a rioting mob had attempted to free them by storming the armory in which the soldiers held them captive.

PRISONERS RETURNED

Martin will bring the prisoners to the courthouse.

Despite the high feeling which still is rife along the Eastern Shore and which culminated in the pitched battle yesterday at Salisbury between civilians and guardsmen, it was announced at the Governor's mansion no militia would be sent to Princess Anne.

Following a conference with Gov. Ritchie and Adjt.-Gen. Milton A. Reckford, at Annapolis, Attorney General Lane said he had recommended the prisoners should be taken to Princess Anne only in custody of Warden Martin and several deputies. Lane said the national guardsmen had been demobilized and will not be called out again.

Widow Gives Original Nevin Score to Pitt

'Mighty Lak a Rose' Added to Group At University

Gracious in her reminiscences of her famous husband, Mrs. Ethelbert Nevin presented the original manuscript of "Mighty Lak a Rose," to the University of Pittsburgh yesterday to add to the already large collection of Ethelbert Nevin's works.

While seated in sight of her husband's first piano on which he did all of his composing in his youthful days at Vineacres, his Sewickley home, Mrs. Nevin spoke of her first meeting with the composer.

With two of her classmates at Bishop Bowman's Institute on Penn avenue, a select school for girls, 15-year-old Anne Paul decided to "skip" Friday afternoon classes and go to Sewickley for a week-end visit at her friends' homes. At the station the three girls were met by Ethelbert Nevin and two of his friends.

Since a grapevine swing on the hill across the river was very popular with the younger set of the time, the six decided to go over and try it.

When it came young Ethelbert's turn to swing, he tumbled off and was badly bruised and his ankle sprained. The others were sympathetic, but pretty Anne from Oakmont just stood and laughed. And Ethelbert, shocked, exclaimed:

"I think that Anne Paul is the rudest, coldest girl I've ever seen."

There are many other mementoes of their early life besides the piano now in the possession of the university. Diaries, pictures, faded notices of their "grand wedding," January 5, 1888, and, most precious of all, the yellowed manuscript of "Oh That We Two Were Maying," presented to Anne Paul by her husband on her wedding day.

She has known and been friends with all the famous personages of the music of this age and of a past generation. The great Sousa was her friend. For her work in the passage of the copyright bill in 1909 she was made a member of the Composers' Society, which last week returned to her "Mighty Lak' a Rose," which she had earlier presented to them, that it might be given to Pitt.

TRIAL MAY HEAR RUBY BATES

International News Service.

DECATUR, Ala., Nov. 29.—A mysterious woman witness rushed here secretly by automobile from Birmingham was slated to take the stand for the Scottsboro defense today in the trial of Heywood Patterson, one of seven Negroes charged with mistreating two Huntsville (Ala.) white girls.

Identity of the young woman was kept closely guarded and rumors that she was Ruby Bates, one of the alleged attack victims, remained unconfirmed.

The "hobo trip" which ended in the famous Scottboro incident in which 12 Negroes were accused of attacking two white mill girls, was a planned pleasure excursion, Lester Carter, 21, testified in the trial today.

Carter denied the two girls were in the gondola car in which Victoria Price testified the fight with the Negroes occurred. He declared no attacks took place while he was on the train.

Liniment Taken By Mistake Fatal

Liniment he had mistaken for stomach medicine resulted in the death of Adam Butkus, 45, of 2209 Sarah street, early today, according to a police report. He died upon his arrival at South Side Hospital. His wife, Mrs. Anna Butkus, said her husband had been ill for several weeks.

TOUHY DENIES FACTOR CRIME

ST. PAUL, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Roger Touhy and three associates will waive extradition to Chicago where they are wanted on charges of kidnaping John Factor, their counsel said in police court today.

Pleas of not guilty were entered for Touhy, Eddie McFadden, Willie Sharkey and Gustav Schafer after fugitive warrants accusing them of Factor's $70,000 abduction last July, were read.

Thomas McMeeking, defense attorney in the William Hamm, Jr., kidnaping of which they were acquitted yesterday by a federal court jury, said the defendants "are ready and anxious to return to Illinois. They will waive extradition."

December 2 was set for the removal hearing.

Vallee Divorce Fight To Resume Friday

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(INS.)—Opposing attorneys have until Friday to file briefs in the request of Fay Webb Vallee for an order restraining her husband, Rudy Vallee, from going to Mexico to obtain a divorce, and an order setting aside a separation agreement made between the couple.

15 Held in Lynching Charged to Klan

GREENVILLE, S. C., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Four additional arrests, making a total of 15, were made here in connection with the slaying of George Green, 73-year-old Negro, by a masked and hooded mob that invaded his home near Taylors, in this county, November 16.

In his warrant, the state investigator charged that the Ku Klux Klan chapter of Greenville had been requested by the white landlord of Green to "do whatever was necessary" to get the tenant out of his home.

LINDY DODGING FEVER SCARE

PORTO PRAIA, Cape Verde Islands, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh sent wireless messages to Senegalese ports south of Dakar today, asking information on health conditions on that portion of the African coast.

The yellow fever scare at Dakar, Senegal, caused him to change his plans to fly to that city from here, where he has rested since Monday.

He put 50 gallons of gasoline into the big monoplane today and planned to sleep aboard it again tonight, as he has since the arrival.

Dakar authorities suggested to him that because of an isolated case of yellow fever they preferred that Mrs. Lindbergh, who is accompanying the Colonel, not be exposed unnecessarily to the possible danger.

Hit by Automobile, North Side Man Dies

William K. Dormeyer, 60, of 1317 Boyle street, North Side, died this morning in Allegheny General Hospital from injuries received when struck by an automobile in Federal street last Saturday.

Homewood Lawyer Ordered to Jail

Attorney Joseph B. Weddell, 59, of 1308 North Murtland avenue, was ordered to jail in default of $1,000 bail today on a charge of subornation of perjury.

Alderman Thomas A. Geary, in holding Weddell for Criminal Court, at the same time discharged Cora Smith, Negro, of 47 Sinola way, who had been arrested on a similar charge.

Boy Hunter Killed By Gunshot Charge

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 29.—Struck by a gunshot charge fired by an unidentified hunting companion, Edward Siwula, 15, of Everson, died today.

Herbert May Gets Post With League

Herbert L. May, brother of Edwin and Walter May, of Pittsburgh, has been elected to the Permanent Central Board of the League of Nations, according to a news report from Geneva, Switzerland. The only American on the board, May is also the only representative of the United States among the four League officials who supervise the legitimate narcotic traffic throughout the world.

Mama Gives Doris Duke Accordion for Birthday

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Doris Duke's birthday present—in addition to all those millions—was an accordion.

Cholly Knickerbocker, society editor of the American, made the fact known today in recording that "many grace notes are being dropped about the Duke mansion by society's richest accordion player."

The "richest girl in the world" was granted her principal birthday wish by Mrs. Duke, her mother, and is now taking lessons.

Miss Duke received a third of the Duke tobacco and water power millions November 22 when she came of age.

Negro Jailer Dies Hero, Balks Robber's Escape

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Two Negroes died violent deaths in the sister states of Missouri and Kansas last night, within 100 miles of each other.

One was a hero; the other the object of a mob's hatred.

At St. Joseph, Mo., Lloyd Warner, 19, confessed attacker of two women, was hanged and burned to death by a crowd of 7,000.

In Topeka, the capital city of Kansas, Benjamin J. Davidson, night jailer, lost his life as he frustrated the escape of Cecil Thornbrugh, Kansas desperado.

Soon after the 53-year-old Negro jailer was slugged and then fatally wounded with his own pistol, a menacing crowd gathered outside the jail and Thornbrugh was hurried to the state penitentiary at Lansing.

Thornbrugh slugged the jailer in a room in which he and other prisoners were confined, free from their cells. The two battled for possession of Davidson's pistol.

The desperado wrested the pistol from Davidson and fired three times, two shots entering the Negro's chest.

With his waning strength, Davidson grappled with his younger assailant. He tossed Thornbrugh backward down the steps from the upper cell tier, the prisoner being knocked unconscious.

When assigned as night jailer Davidson had promised his superiors:

"A prisoner will kill me before he gets away."

He made good that promise.

HERRON MADE SMALL GAIN IN FINAL RACE

Mayor John S. Herron polled only 3,230 more votes in the general election than in the primary, figures released by the return board showed today.

Herron's candidacy on the Citizens' ticket gained him only 258 votes, it was revealed. His total was 75,674, as against 102,867 for Mayor-elect William N. McNair.

The official figures, minus the "hijacked" Eighth District of the Seventeenth Ward, gave mayoralty candidates William J. VanEssen, Socialist, 418 votes; George D. Harger, Prohibition, 211, and Joseph N. Mackrell, Liberal and Square Deal, 255.

MAGEE'S TOTAL HIGH

Running on five tickets, Councilman-elect William A. Magee received 166,683 votes, the largest total of any candidate for city office. Democratic councilmanic candidates polled more than five times their primary figures. Council returns were:

Democrats—John M. Huston, 97,940; Thomas J. Gallagher, 94,824; John J. Kane, 95,454; Walter R. Demmler, 92,043.

Prohibition—John D. Houston, 3,520; William H. Womsley, 802; William G. Hohmann, 955; Albert F. Faust, 571; John W. Grubbs, 710.

Other parties—James F. Malone, Independent and Liberal, 7,786; Louis Wechsler, Independent, 1,250; Sarah M. Phillips, Independent, 1,901; Edwin J. Wuerthele, Liberal, 531; J. M. Stack, Liberal, 719; Edward Townsend, Square Deal, 970; John Nuskay, Square Deal, 201; John B. Nunkey, Square Deal, 188.

COURT RESULTS

In the County Court elections, Benjamin Lencher, running on five tickets, took 192,100 votes; Frank A. Piekarski, Republican and Independent, had 164,443.

Other parties' figures were: James L. O'Toole, Jr., Democrat, 145,854; Austin L. Staley, Democrat and Square Deal, 140,436; Louis Stark, Socialist, 4,967; William A. Walker, Prohibition, 12,139; Clarence B. Nixon, Prohibition, 11,182; John J. McGrath, Liberal, 9,692.

Gustav L. Schramm, Democrat, won his election to Juvenile Court by the unusually high vote of 208,431. Other returns were Charles G. Lane, Republican, 123,574; Lois McBride, Socialist and Independent, 13,476; Burtt Harris, Prohibition, 2,015; J. L. Schramm, Liberal, 3,656.

Returns for Coroner were: William J. McGregor, Republican and Independent, 186,435; Vincent L. Marino, Democrat, 162,354; Arthur Perrin, Socialist, 3,926; Fred W. Litten, Prohibition, 4,003; W. J. McGregor, Citizens, 4,182; V. L. Marino, Liberal, 1,418.

The poor director vote was: Villia F. Henderson, Republican and Independent, 87,702; William S. Cooper, Jr., Democrat, 74,560; Mildred Adler, Socialist, 4,100; John G. Hosick, Prohibition, 3,166; R. J. Strathearne, Liberal, 1,212; Bernard L. Flinn, Square Deal, 4,033.

SURVEYOR RACE CLOSE

The almost payless office of county surveyor gained a point of interest in being the second closest race in the county. It was won by James C. Jordan, Republican, Independent and Liberal, with 163,689 votes, as against 162,498 for William McClurg Donley, Democrat. Edward S. McClintock, Socialist, had 5,126; P. Torrence Gamble, Prohibition, 5167.

Meanwhile the closest race—for sheriff—remained officially undecided. Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar, Republican, led John Heinz, Democrat, by 525 votes, excepting the votes of the "hijacked" district, and some 38 districts still to be recounted.

Democrats yesterday withdrew their request for recounts in the Common Pleas election, with Judge Harry H. Rowand, Republican, leading John J. Kennedy, Democrat, by 6,925 votes. Official returns are expected tomorrow.

In Braddock another nip and tuck contest, where Fred Seim, Democratic candidate for burgess leads by 19 votes, according to unofficial estimates, still hung in the balance. Recount on the last of four Braddock districts brought to the recount board was to be completed today. Burgess James H. Rose is the Republican candidate.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 29.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

You can watch it from telling jokes about it. Every once in so often America "goes serious." Get all excited and mad at each other. One of these times is just before election. Anything that's said the other side takes offense.

Will Rogers

Yet all our last Presidents have been elected by millions, showing that all that heat and perspiration was wasted. Then after election is over, you can call the other side a yellow dog, and they just laugh, for they have their sense of humor back.

Now we are going into another one of those serious tailspins over this money racket. And it's just like the election—nothing you can do, nothing you can say will change a person's opinion.

It will all work itself out, without any personal lather from any of us. And in a few months we will regain our humor and balance. It's just a serious spree that we have every so often to get it out of our system.

Yours, WILL.

RIPLEY SHOW KNOCKOUT, SAYS SPORTS EDITOR

Gate Crasher Lauds Cartoonist, His Old Pal

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Sportively speaking, Bob Ripley's Odditorium show, in the former Campbell store, 333 Fifth avenue, is what we'd call a knockout.

Who would have thought that the young Bob Ripley we knew as a sports cartoonist some years ago would come up with a show such as this one? It's a Believe It Or Not in itself. Bob always was such a quiet, bashful guy, and now he's knocking the world's eye out with his amazing exhibit.

A fellow at the door said he thought I had an honest face when I told him I had lost my ticket, but was there to do a story on the show from a sporting angle.

I didn't know whether that was supposed to mean I didn't look like a sports writer, so I cracked back:

"Believe it or not!"

It seems that was the password, for they took a chance and let me in. I was looking around for some sporting exhibits when I ran into my old sidekick, E. L. Blystone, of Ardara, Pa., who writes the Lord's Prayer on a grain of rice and inscribes cards and other articles in such a small handwriting that he keeps a dozen magnifying glass companies busy turning out a supply to keep up with him.

Bly didn't know of anything that was out-and-out sport, but he thought it wouldn't be a bad idea to take a look at the gent who sticks hatpins through his cheeks and seems to like it, remarking:

"Some fun, eh, sport?"

Then I knew I was traveling down my own boulevard.

Imagine that fellow sticking a baseball in his mouth, and also finding room for four golf balls or two billiard balls at one time. He'd get turned down at any football training table!

I felt a nudge at my elbow while watching the fellow who plays with fire and was ready to give myself up when I discovered my neighbor was Lew Raymond, the boxing matchmaker, who knew Ripley "when" back in New York, and who chuckled and said:

"Hot stuff, huh?"

Say, Blystone wouldn't make a bad scorekeeper for sports, would he? And he wouldn't be a bad gent to have around to write the figures into a boxing contract.

What an eyeful the original Pop Eye could get at any sporting spectacle—he must have got that way looking at Rip's other wonders.

Edna Price does a neat sword-swallowing act, and there's that guy Laurello, who walks east while he's facing west and could crash more gates without half trying, than One-Eye Connelly does with tickets.

A real wonder is John T. Powers, the man without vocal cords, who speaks, believe it or not. He'd make a good cheerleader if Paul Desmuke, the armless phenomenon, could throw forward passes.

They even have midgets, a leopard-skinned gent, a rubber-bodied girl, an ossified man and—well the show's all its cracked up to be. No wonder it baffled our Globe Trotter on the opening night, and Louie is a well-known hard-to-baffle gent. It's better than a wrestling show, which has come to be regarded as the height of variety in sports.

Because of the holiday tomorrow, they're going to have the kick-off on Rip's game at 10 a. m. to give the children a break. It will cost the youngsters, 12 years and under, only a dime between then and noon.

The same treat will be repeated Saturday. The Friday opening, however, will be at 11:45 a. m. The Sun-Telegraph's share of the week's proceeds goes to Christmas charities.

Some 2,000 persons entered from noon until 4 p. m. yesterday, when your sports correspondent, believe it or not, managed to crash the gate and get away with it. The fellow on the door muttered something about getting the next guy, so you'd better not try it.

CLAIRE VICTOR AGAINST READ

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Alfred C. Read, Jr., Oakland broker, whose former wife won a $75,000 heart balm judgment from Claire Windsor, blonde stage and screen actress, was convicted last night by a Municipal Court jury on a charge of stealing $11 from the actress' purse October 14.

An oral motion for a new trial was made and the municipal judge set December 7 as the date to hear the motion and impose sentence.

The jury deliberated about two hours, retiring soon after the actress, in an angry outburst of words, called Read a "liar and a cheap thief." He acted as his own counsel and her fiery accusation was made in response to Read's question: "Why did you call me a dangerous man?"

Always the Finest Tobaccos

AND

Only the Center Leaves

Not only from our own Southland—but from Turkey—from Greece—from all over the world—the very cream of tobacco crops is gathered for Lucky Strike. And only the center leaves are used—no stem—no stalk. Each Lucky Strike is fully packed—firmly rolled. Even the ends of the cigarettes are filled—brimful of choicest tobaccos. No loose ends—that's why Luckies draw easily and burn evenly.

river. Usually men go down to the river to jump in, but here you would have to walk up to jump in. Nobody would jump in and leave a city like this.

In Huey Long's town such a racketeer would soon be paying some lawyer for protection and vainly.

YOU VISIT the oldest apartment house, the "Pontalba," where Meigs Frost lives, and will try to get you an apartment for the Mardi Gras.

That long building was erected in 1848, by Baroness Micaele, Antonio, Leonardo, Almonesta y Yojas de Pontalba. (Compare that name with "Mr. Smith.") No wonder American girls marry foreigners. Thackeray and Jenny Lind slept in the Pontalba apartment.

YOU SEE the old "Congo Square," now Beauregard Square, named for the fighting Louisiana general, and high on its noble monument, the statue of Robert E. Lee.

Lee towers above Beauregard Square, but in old days when a Virginian praised Lee's work, the New Orleans Creole gentleman replied:

"Yes, I have often heard Gen. Beauregard speak well of him."

IF GHOSTS come back at midnight you should hear a shuffling of dark ghostly feet on the old square that once was called "Congo Square" because it was devoted to the Negroes.

There they gathered every night to dance the "Bamboula," imported from Africa. They danced and laughed, as only the patient African race can laugh, until nine o'clock, when the firing of an old muzzle-loading cannon warned them to take cover.

After nine o'clock at night, any Negro found on the street, without the written permit of his owner (they were all slaves, of course), was taken to the calaboose, where his owner came to claim him in the morning.

In one separate quarter, away from the aristocratic Jackson square, you see houses that once blazed with lights, rang with song, and popping corks, now tightly closed and virtuously dark.

Those Abe Shushan, barring euphemism from the French language, decorously describes as les maisons de joie, "dismal joy," closed tight, by government orders, in the war excitement, when men took "cold reason" to their bosoms, put an eternal swear-off in the Constitution thinking they were going on the water wagon for life, only to find out that they had gone on the bath tub gin wagon. Les maisons de joie have not come back.

Abe Shushan points out the biggest, once gayest, gloomiest of them all, Lulu White's place.

Lulu White, an octoroon, one-eighth African blood, allowed only white women and men in her place, and lived on the viciousness of white men and the poverty of white girls. You may be sure that it was the seven-eighths white, and not the one-eighth African that ran that institution so profitably.

SEEING THE welcome end approach, you will ask:

"But what about Senator Huey P. Long?"

How can you go to New Orleans and not see him, tell about him.

He was seen and shall be told about, but you cannot "draw up Leviathan with an hook" nor can you pack Huey P. Long into one corner of a newspaper column; he needs space, high and wide, and soon in this column he shall have it.

Meanwhile, as he is in the front of the news now, one anecdote which he prints in his book "Every Man a King" and which he confirmed today shall be put before you.

IT SHOWS he-man electioneering in the Sunny South.

Mr. Long, not yet Senator, and "out after a politician named Thomas, told this story to audiences.

"They made an experiment in character. They put a polecat in a room, and sent in a Chinaman. He stayed there just 10 minutes, came out gasping for breath.

"They put a savage from the Fiji Islands in with the polecat. He stayed 15 minutes, and had to be dragged out.

"Then they put this man Thomas in with the polecat, and at the end of five minutes, the polecat came out gasping for breath, and he never did recover entirely."

THE NEXT stop on the way to San Simeon, Cal., will be San Antonio, Tex.

TASTE IN WATER NOT HARMFUL

If your fawcet water has a tea or vegetable taste don't worry—it won't harm you.

This assurance was given today by C. F. Drake, superintendent of the city's filteration plant on the Allegheny River. Drake explains that the heavy snowfall at the watershed has washed leaves and other vegetable matter into the Clarion River, thence into the Allegheny.

High Court Decision Ends Group's Row

CONTROL BOARD AND STORES PROVIDED

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 29. — Salient features of the liquor bills adopted by the General Assembly to regulate the sale of liquor in Pennsylvania after repeal is officially proclaimed next Tuesday follow:

A control board of three members, each to be paid $10,000 annually, to issue licenses and have complete jurisdiction over the liquor business in the Keystone State.

Establishment of state stores by January 1, 1934, for package sales only between 9 a. m. and 9 p. m. on all days except Sundays, legal holidays and election days.

Retail sales to be made by restaurants, hotels, dining cars and steamboats from 7 a. m. to 2 a. m. the following day except on Sundays and election day. Up to January 1, licensees will be permitted to make package as well as individual sales.

24 HOURS FOR CLUBS

Private clubs are not prohibited from having bars and can retail liquor 24 hours a day. The Attorney General holds the bill does not permit club sales on Sunday or election days. Clubs catering to the public will pay the same license fees as hotels but private club licensed fees will be $50 annually.

License fees for hotels and restaurants range from $150 in municipalities having a population less than 1,500 to $600 in municipalities having a population in excess of 140,000.

All money derived from licenses will be turned over to municipalities in which the establishments are located. In second class townships the money will go to school districts coextensive with such townships.

To qualify for licenses, hotels are required to have 10 guest rooms in cities and six in other municipalities. Restaurants must have a floor space of 500 square feet with a seating capacity of 50 persons.

IMPORTS BARRED

Importation of liquor from other states by individuals is prohibited after January 1.

The personnel of state stores shall be selected on the basis of competitive examinations to be given by the Department of Public Instruction. The stores may be located at any place designated by the board. Quarter Sessions Courts are authorized to hear complaints against establishment of stores on a petition signed by 15 taxpayers residing within a quarter of a mile of the proposed site.

Elections may be held not more than once every four years for outlawing retail sales in individual municipalities.

Liquor to Return Even To Towns Barring Beer

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 29.—(INS.)—A 13-year thirst will end Tuesday and legalized hard liquor will return to every Pennsylvania municipality, even those that voted against the retail sale of 3.2 per cent beer at the November election, under provisions of the McClure control bill passed finally by the Legislature today.

The McClure bill provides for local option, but no balloting can take place before the 1934 general election. Voting on the prohibition of retail liquor sales is permitted not more than once every four years.

DISTILLERS WIN COURT FIGHT

International News Service.

KITTANNING, Pa., Nov. 29.—The Pennsylvania Distilling Company today emerged victorious in its long battle with state officials for the right to manufacture liquor at its Logansport plant without a state permit.

The company twice had been denied a certificate by the Pennsylvania Alcohol Permit Board for the Logansport distillery, and subsequently the matter went to court.

Judge J. Frank Graff dismissed a bill in equity filed against the firm by the Armstrong County district attorney, who had sought an injunction to stop manufacture. The court decided that under a federal permit issued to three of its directors, the company is authorized to manufacture and stock a limited amount of medicinal whisky.

Democrats Demand M'Clure Resignation

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Resignation of State Senator John J. McClure, of Delaware County, recently convicted with 70 others on liquor conspiracy charges, is demanded by the Democratic Club of suburban Aldan.

The club adopted a resolution last night asserting that the county "is entitled to a representative in the Senate who is above suspicion and in whom the citizens may have complete confidence."

Founder Honored At Store Party

An informal dance and banquet by 750 Rosenbaum employes honored the memory of the founder, Max Rosenbaum, last night. A dinner was held in the Rosenbaum dining room. Speakers included Max Rothchild, former Rosenbaum president; Walter Rosenbaum, and Dr. David R. Craig, of the Retail Research Bureau at Pitt.

Liquor Control, State Store System Enacted

'Best in America,' Pinchot Says in Signing Bill

the Superior Court; A. Marshall Thompson, dean of the University of Pittsburgh Law School, and Thomas W. Phillips, Butler oil man.

Under the state store system, all profit from sales after liquor leaves the distillery will accrue to the state.

This means there will be no private profit in the handling of liquor—a feature that administration supporters have claimed will remove objectionable stimulation of liquor consumption by private interests.

Throngs packed both the Senate and the House during the night-long wrangle over amendments to the control bill and watched intently as the measure was shuttled back and forth between the two houses for concurrence in various changes.

As finally enacted, the bill provides:

That state liquor stores, which begin operation January 2, shall be open between 9 a. m. and 9 p. m.

That hotels and restaurants licensed by the Control Board may sell by the drink between 7 a. m. and 2 a. m. and until state stores are established will handle bottle and case trade also.

That clubs may sell to members 24 hours a day and that they may have bars.

That waitresses may serve and mix drinks.

TAX BILLS PENDING

Two bills, passed finally by the House at the fag-end of the early morning place a tax of $1 a gallon on liquor after repeal and boost distillery, brewery and winery permit fees. They now are before the Senate.

The House adjourned early today until 9 p. m. Monday.

Tired and weary Senators met at 10 a. m., but were unable to muster a quorum after the exhausting session of last night and early morning, and deferred final vote on the bill to continue the $1.24 a barrel tax on beer and apply it to all malt beverages after the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed.

Routine disposed of, the Senators followed the House members home for the Thanksgiving Day recess.

Coupled with the $2 a gallon floor tax law, enacted last week, the legislation which went to the Governor this morning gives the state complete control and taxing power over liquor and wines from the moment repeal becomes effective.

The Senate passed the control bill by a vote of 33 to 14. Under it, liquor may be bought by the package only from state stores after January 1. The price is expected to be about $2 a quart for standard brands.

From the liquor profits, the Governor expects to obtain additional funds for unemployment relief, as well as for old-age assistance and for some preliminary move toward unemployment insurance.

It is estimated that about 300 stores will be scattered through the commonwealth.

In putting through his program, the Governor had the support of the wet Republican organization in Pittsburgh.

FOUGHT BY DISTILLERS

The liquor program moved slowly over a rocky legislative road, fought at every turn by the liquor interests. Gov. Pinchot was accused of trying to make himself "whisky king" of Pennsylvania and "ride into the United States Senate on a whisky barrel."

After the Legislature enacted the law levying a pre-repeal tax of $2 a gallon, the distillers got a temporary injunction in Pittsburgh Federal Court restraining the state from collecting it. A final hearing is set for December 6, the day after prohibition repeal.

The Governor says the Control Board's complexion will prevent the mixing of liquor and politics in the administration of state stores.

Thompson, a Democrat, was appointed for a four-year-term; Gawthrop, a Republican, for six years, and Phillips, Republican, for two years.

CLUB AMENDMENTS

Of the various amendments inserted before the bill, bearing the name of Representative James H. McClure, Allegheny, was passed, those eliminating many of the restrictions on clubs were definitely beyond the lines laid out by advance agreements. They were made by a last-ditch fight of Philadelphia wets in the House.

The Control Board's power to refuse and revoke club licenses was canceled and restrictions which would have prevented 24-hour sales of liquor in clubs were stricken out. A section which specifically barred Sunday sales in clubs was removed, but legal authorities said this omission is unimportant in view of the long-standing prohibition against such sales contained in the Blue Laws of 1794.

SENATE DEBATE

In Senate debate on the bill, Senator Prince, Cumberland, urged approval, terming it "a signally constructive piece of legislation." He said:

"If we should start with license and later adopt the state stores system or outright prohibition, we should have to face the expense of condemnation proceedings and consequent damages. But if we start with the state stores plan and later should turn either to prohibition or to license, no such problem could arise because no such investment rights would be involved."

Senator Henry L. Snyder, Lehigh, Democrat, opposed passage. Reviewing Gov. Pinchot's campaign for a state store system, Snyder criticized the measure as another step in the creation of a bureaucracy.

He predicted the proposed state stores "will not be operated at a profit" and that the venture would be a "costly experiment."

He warned the Legislature against "inviting lawlessness by adopting laws which would not be enforced."

Referring to what he termed "mirth-provoking" features of the bill, Snyder criticized the civil service examination system for selecting liquor store salesmen and bookkeepers.

Liquor Control Plan at a Glance

Associated Press.

Establishes a state stores liquor monopoly.

Sets up a three-man liquor control board to supervise state stores and license hotels, restaurants, clubs, steamboats and railroad dining cars to dispense intoxicants by the drink.

Permits hotels and restaurants to sell liquor by the drink between 7 a. m. and 2 a. m.

Permits waitresses to serve and mix drinks.

Allows purchase of packaged liquor (quantities of a quart or more) only at state stores, which operate from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. every week day except Election days and legal holidays.

Stipulates liquor may be sold by the drink only to persons seated.

Sets January 1 for opening of state stores, but from December 5 until that time the control board may permit hotels and restaurants to sell packaged liquors.

Outlaws the saloon "forever."

CHOATE NAMED RUM CHIEF BY ROOSEVELT

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt today appointed Joseph H. Choate, Jr., New York attorney, as administrator of the federal liquor control code.

The President also named a governmental advisory board for the liquor dictator.

This board includes W. A. Carver, of the Department of Justice; Edward G. Lowry, of the Treasury; W. L. Thorpe, of the Department of Commerce, and Harris Willingham, of the Department of Agriculture.

WILL GOVERN INDUSTRY

Choate will govern the liquor industry from the time of repeal of prohibition next week until Congress sets up a permanent method of control.

The administration position in this regard was said today at the Little White House to be:

2—The sale of good liquor at reasonable prices.

3—Elimination of bootlegging.

No decision has been reached on liquor taxes and the administration is considering a joint collection of liquor revenues by the federal and state governments.

Under this plan, the occupational tax on liquor, such as licenses by restaurants and the like, would go to the state and be collected by the state, with the federal government collecting a volume tax to be divided between the national and state units.

This proposition, however, has not been decided upon and is receiving further study.

TARIFF DEAL HINTED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—The government was revealed today to be negotiating with liquor exporting countries on the basis of "you buy our products, and we'll allow yours entry here in proportion."

Secret discussions have been under way for some time, it became apparent in testimony by Moredecai Ezekiel, economic advisor to Secretary Wallace, on the proposed code for the importing end of the liquor business.

Hotel Astor Gets First Rum License

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(INS.)—The first hard liquor licenses to be issued in the United States since the birth of prohibition more than 13 years ago, were approved today for 52 New York City hotels by the State Alcohol Beverage Control Board.

The Hotel Astor was first under the wire and receives coveted license No. 1. License No. 2 goes to the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria; No. 3 to Hotel Biltmore and No. 4 to the Plaza.

Hip Flask Liquor Not Banned by Control Bill

HARRISBURG, Nov. 29.—(INS.)—The era of speakeasies may have been ended by Gov. Gifford Pinchot's approval of the McClure liquor control bill today, but that of hip flasks continues.

Carrying of hip flasks, a practice that became universal during the prohibition era which ends Tuesday, is not prohibited by the liquor law. Flasks or bottles containing liquor may be carried providing the beverage is obtained through legal channels. In addition, the law does not contain any provisions against drinking from bottles in public.

PHILLIPS STILL SHUNS RUM JOB

Even after Gov. Pinchot had sent his name to the Senate and the Senate early today had confirmed the appointment, Thomas W. Phillips, of Butler, repeated to the Sun-Telegraph today his refusal to serve as a member of the new State Liquor Control Board. Mr. Phillips, long active against prohibition, said:

"I told the Governor when he called me some time ago I could not consider such an appointment. Nothing has changed my mind. I won't serve under any circumstances."

Mr. Phillips, wealthy oil, gas and coal operator, former Congressman, and an anti-prohibition gubernatorial candidate a few years ago, was asked whether he had refused because the position might interfere with any lingering ambitions to sit in the Governor's throne. He declined to comment. The board is scheduled to begin its task Friday or Saturday of licensing hotels, restaurants and clubs which will be sole dispensers of liquor until state liquor stores are established January 1.

ASK FIXED VOTE LIST FOR STATE

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 29. — Apparently destined to lie in committee while privately-sponsored measures are given right-of-way, the administration's bill setting up permanent registration in all cities was before the Senate today.

The bill was offered for Gov. Gifford Pinchot by Senator Frank J. Harris, Allegheny, whose own bill for permanent registration for Pittsburgh is on the Senate's second reading calendar.

Senator Harris said he expected the administration bill would be kept in committee. Another measure to apply to third-class cities will be introduced in the Senate, he said, and a bill applying to Philadelphia has been offered in the House by Representative Louis Schwartz, Philadelphia.

The Howell bill applying only to Scranton has passed the Senate and is now in the House.

ASSEMBLY GETS NEW BILLS

HARRISBURG, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Control of Pennsylvania's milk industry by a nine-man commission is proposed in three bills in the Legislature today. They were introduced by Representative A. J. White Hutton, Franklin.

Other bills introduced:

Lynch, Allegheny, making it unlawful for manufacturers of beer and wines to sell to unlicensed distributors, except for export.

Harmuth, Allegheny, creating a state Emergency Public Works Commission to prepare a list of projects for immediate construction to provide employment immediately.

O'Keefe, Allegheny, providing for classification of real estate in second-class counties to distinguish between buildings and land so that a separate tax may be levied on each.

Representatives Stevens, Westmoreland, and Gallagher, Allegheny, imposing annual excise mercantile taxes on chain stores.

Senator Harris, Allegheny, eliminating employment of watchers as a legal campaign expense for election candidates.

Senator Parkinson, Greene, prohibiting the manufacture or sale of more than one brand of liquor by the same distillery.

Senator Harris, Allegheny, providing permanent personal registration of voters in all cities, with registration commissions of four members.

POLICE AID RUM APPLICANTS

HARRISBURG, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Pennsylvania state police are assisting restaurateurs, hotel proprietors and club stewards in determining their qualifications to receive liquor licenses under proposed State Control Board regulations.

Troopers and state highway patrolmen today were checking dimensions and kitchen facilities of hotels, restaurants and clubs that have been licensed to sell beer, so that data will be available immediately to Liquor Control Board officers.

Maj. C. M. Wilhelm, deputy superintendent of state police, said the officers are making the state-wide survey as a "voluntary" assistance to prospective applicants for liquor licenses.

Bank Tax Repealer Passed by Senate

HARRISBURG, Nov. 29.—(INS.)—Passed unanimously in the Senate under suspension of the rules, the Einstein bill repealing the four-mill tax on interest-bearing bank deposits was in the House today.

The $8,000,000 estimated revenue that would be lost by repealing the act would be made up in liquor revenues.

Welfare Fund Drive To Aid Poor Extended

Biggest Day Brings in $118,829; Total Still Short of Goal

With two-thirds of its $2,837,000 goal chalked up to date, the Welfare Fund today continued its drive to raise its 1934 budget, following agreement yesterday to extend the campaign at least another week.

Subscriptions totaling $118,829 were reported yesterday, constituting the largest single day's report since the opening of the drive, and bringing the grand total to $1,806,148—approximately $100,000 less than had been pledged by the scheduled closing day last year.

With extension of the campaign, the next report meeting was set for Monday noon.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO BE A FOOTBALL REFEREE

M. J. ("MIKE") THOMPSON, FAMOUS FOOTBALL REFEREE

IF YOU WANT TO SEE nerve strain, look at "Mike" Thompson's job—refereeing two tons of football brawn, seeing every detail, but never getting in the players' way. "Mike" Thompson has been a steady smoker for years. "I'm open-minded on cigarettes," he says, "but I've got to keep my nerves in shape, so I stick to Camels."

A MATCHLESS BLEND

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW
Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

M. J. ("Mike") Thompson, football's most famous referee, has to keep his nerves healthy. He says:

"Because nothing can be allowed to interfere with healthy nerves I smoke Camels. I have tried them all—given every popular brand a chance to show what it can offer. Camels don't upset my nerves even when I smoke constantly. And the longer I smoke them the more I come to appreciate their mildness and rich flavor."

Many smokers who have changed to Camels report that their nerves are no longer irritable . . . "jumpy." Switch to Camels yourself. You will find that Camels do not jangle your nerves—or tire your taste.

CHARITY GROUPS TO CHEER NEEDY ON THANKSGIVING

PLAN DINNERS IN ALL PARTS OF CITY

Banishing for a few hours the memory of months of privation, turkey with all the "trimmin's" for thousands of Pittsburgh's needy will be the dominant note in the city's 1933 observance of Thanksgiving Day, tomorrow.

And impressing with dramatic intensity the spirit of Thanksgiving, hundreds of church services throughout the city will deal with the niche the day fills in the 1933 scheme of events.

First of the feasts for the needy will be held at the Goodwill Industries Community buildings, Liberty avenue and Twenty-eighth street, tonight, with hundreds of workers and their families attending.

Five thousand school children will be the dinner guests of the Salvation Army at the organization's headquarters, 425 Boulevard of the Allies, from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m. tomorrow.

Other Army institutions at which Thanksgiving dinner will be served are the Home for Transient Women, Home for Children, the Hospital for Women and the homes for men at Plummer street, Nixon street, McKeesport, Braddock, Homestead and Duquesne.

VETS TO BE GUESTS

Four hundred families in the county will have 620 war veterans as Thanksgiving guests, it was announced by the United American Veterans Association, 130 Seventh street, where requests for veteran-guests singly or in groups of two or three have been pouring in for the last two weeks.

A dinner for men, women and children will be served at the Volunteers of America headquarters, 724 East Diamond street, North Side, tomorrow, Col. Frank H. Wise, regional director, announced. An entertainment also is scheduled.

Steve Forrest, Pittsburgh vaudeville agent, will present a 10-act vaudeville show, "Woods Run Revue," for inmates of Western Penitentiary during the morning.

Thanksgiving Eve parties scheduled include a holiday show and games at the Irene Kaufmann Settlement tonight and a bingo under the auspices of Division 7, A. O. H., at the A. O. H. Hall, Fifty-second and Carnegie avenue, at 8 p. m. A party for children at the Settlement today also was part of the holiday program.

Tomorrow, a concert and dance, beginning at 3 p. m., will be held at the International Socialist Lyceum, 805 James street, North Side, under the auspices of District 5, Communist Party.

Dedicating their new indoor target pistol range, members of the Bellevue Police Revolver Club will hold a competition shoot in the basement of the Bellevue Savings and Trust Company Building tomorrow at 2:30 p. m.

CHURCH SERVICES

Inaugurating special Thanksgiving church services, Junior Lehman, 19-year-old evangelist, will preach at the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street, tonight. Dr. Frank J. Bryson will speak on "Thanksgiving in Our National History," at the regular Thanksgiving service tomorrow at 10:30 a. m.

Other Thanksgiving Eve church features include a dinner in the East End Christian Church, South Highland avenue and Alder street, with Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson as guest speaker of goods made by the blind at the Church of God, Spahr street, with a musical program by two blind musicians, Ernest Scott, singer, and Prof. Clarence Grogan, pianist.

Dr. Stuart Nye Hutchinson will preach on "Reasons for Thanksgiving in the Year 1933" at the Tabernacle Church tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. "National Repentence and National Thanksgiving" will be the topic of the First Presbyterian Church service at 10:45 a. m. with Dr. C. E. Macartney preaching.

DISTRIBUTE BASKETS

In connection with services at the Sixth United Presbyterian Church, North Highland avenue, at 10:45 a. m., food supplies for the needy and baskets of fruit for sick and shut-ins of the congregation will be distributed.

Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr will preach at the Shadyside Presbyterian Church, Amberson avenue and Westminster place, at 11 a. m. "Thinking of God" will be the topic of services at the Bethlehem Evangelical Lutheran Church, 731 Excelsior street, at 9 and 10 a. m., and "Thanksgiving for Life's Variety," at the North Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, North Side, at 10:30 a. m.

Among union services announced are those at Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church, Forbes street and Murray avenue, at 10:30 a. m.; the North End Methodist Episcopal Church, Bonvue street, North Side, at 10 a. m.; the Fourth United Presbyterian Church, Pacific and Friendship avenues, at 10:30 a. m.; the Ben Avon Presbyterian Church at 10:30 a. m., and the Highland Presbyterian Church at 10:30 a. m.

A Rhyme for Thanksgiving Day

By Edwin Markham

Author of "The Man with the Hoe," "Lincoln, the Man of the People," "The Ballad of the Gallows-Bird" and other famous poems.

I COUNT up in this hour of cheer
The blessings of a busy year:

A ROOF so low I lose no strain,
No ripple of the friendly rain,
A chimney where all Winter long
The logs give back the wild bird's song.

THE tree-toad that is first to cheer
With crinkling flute the green o' the year;
The cricket on the garden mound,
Stitching the dark with threads of sound.

THE wind that cools my hidden spring
And sets my corn-field whispering,
And shakes with Autumn breath for me
Late apples from the apple-tree.

THE shy paths darting thru the wheat,
Marked by the prints of little feet—
Gray squirrels on their thrifty round,
Crows condescending to the ground.

THAT leafy hollow that was stirred
A hundred mornings by a bird
Which sang at daybreak on a brier,
Setting the gray of dawn afire!

THE lone star and the shadowed hush
That comes at evening, when the thrush
Turns with his wild heart all the long
Soft twilight to a mystic song.

THE tender sorrow, too, that came
To leave me nevermore the same;
The love and memories and the wild
Light laughter of a little child.

AND deep thanksgiving for the friend
Who came when all things seemed to end;
Whose courage helped me lift the load,
Whose spirit lit the darkened road.

Cleaning Fluid Blast Burns Girl

Miss Blanche Fluke, 20, was recovering today from burns on her hands and face, suffered when cleaning fluid exploded in her home, 409 North Highland avenue, Oakdale, last night. Fire that followed the explosion caused damage estimated at $1,500.

Miss Fluke was reported to have been cleaning a dress when the blast occurred.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

And a holiday starting, too!

Even school days get long some time. It's good to take a vacation now and then. There won't be a paper tomorrow and so there will not be a Mail Box either, but there will be the day after just as always.

We know everybody is looking forward to eating a swell meal—good things galore, turkey, stuffing, mashed potatoes, cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie and all the other "trimmings."

And lots of fellows will play football and have a good time that way. It's a great day, all right, and we hope every single Junior Patrol member and their families and friends are happy. Everybody, we know, has a right to be thankful. We live in a wonderful world, and even though times are hard now, there are wonderful men working hard to make things better. They are going to succeed, we're sure. In the meantime, and always, you can help others to be happy, too.

And here's a letter from Charles Dym, of 419 Ridge way, Greensburg, Pa. He says:

"I am sending you two more pledges for my friends who want to join very much. We ara writing this letter from our first meeting. The club has got along very well so far. I think it will continue to do so."

Fine and dandy, Charles. Do you have your armband yet? If not, and you have 10 members, please write and tell us who they all are, and if they have sent in pledges, send us their badge numbers. And if they haven't sent in pledges yet, send them in right away and we will send them badges. Or copies of the pledge will do just as well.

FRIENDSHIP KNOT PATTERN 410

Old Time Friendship Quilt

Among the Friendship Quilts—those quilts that are made of materials contributed by friends, or quilts in which each friend makes a block—one of the most popular is the Friendship Knot. An old-time pattern—an heirloom in design—the finished quilt is indeed worthy of being an heirloom. It is very handsome done in a variety of gay scraps, with the knot done in a plain material. This pattern contains two quilting motifs which can be used or omitted as preferred; their arrangement on the quilt is shown in the pattern.

Pattern 410 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, quilting motif, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10 cents for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Puncture Crew Waiting to Work On Blownup Tire

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

The deflators are lined up against the inflators.

Some approve of the four-wheel dollar. Thirty-six pounds pressure all around. No brakes. And let 'er go, Gallagher.

Others are for the miser's dollar. You might call this dental currency. Even though the tooth is decayed we will fill it with gold.

We understand enough of this currency business to be awarded the congressional paper hat.

The experts have told us all they know. And we still don't know anything.

Let's forget all this and turn the clock back to technocracy.

Police Fountains Dry, Repairs Being Made

Central Police Station's water fountains, dry for a month, will gush with fresh, cold water today, or maybe next week.

The dozen fountains throughout the building were dry because the cooling system was in need of a new condenser, it was said. Bids were taken for the installation of a new one and a contract finally awarded.

Delightful for Mornings
Pattern 1540
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

Every smart woman knows that house frocks should be attractive enough to wear when guests drop in unexpectedly, as well as being comfortable when doing daily chores. Therein lies the charm of this model. Diagonal seamings tend to slimness, skirt panels add length below the hips, the neckline adopts contrasting revers for interest and, of course, there's nothing more roomy or comfy than kimono sleeves. Choose a gay cotton print, or if you use a printed silk it would be attractive for afternoon wear.

Pattern 1540 is available in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3⅛ yards 36-inch fabric and ⅜ yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send 15 CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

AUTOMOBILE MILESTONES

KNEE-ACTION WHEELS
jar and bump and bounce abolished

MARKING its 25th Anniversary, General Motors pioneers another great advance in motoring comfort—the abolition of jar and bump and bounce.

After more than two years of engineering research and after thousands of miles of testing on the Proving Ground, a radically new method has been worked out for joining the front wheels of the automobile to the chassis. The effect is to make it possible for each wheel to step over a bump or a hole so that the wheel instead of the passenger takes the jar. We have called this "giving the car Knee-Action Wheels."

This is no minor improvement over the cars of 1933, but a revolutionary change in automobile design, worthy to rank with the introduction of the self-starter by Cadillac in 1912, the adoption of Four-Wheel Brakes by Buick in 1924, and the abolition of drafts by Fisher in 1933. Go as soon as you can and drive a 1934 Chevrolet, Oldsmobile, Pontiac, Buick, La Salle or Cadillac.

To attempt to describe the difference in comfort, especially on the back seat, is impossible. Steering is effortless; safety is much enhanced; the life of the car lengthened. Just the right amount of ventilation reaches you through the controlled no-draft ventilation of Fisher; just the speed that suits you rolls silently beneath your wheels. The ups and downs are so nearly banished by the Knee-Action Wheels that your movement is not a ride—it's a glide.

HOW KNEE-ACTION WHEELS WORK

Your present car is stiff-legged. Stiff front springs are rigidly joined by an I-beam front axle. So when you hit a bump the front of the car bounces, the rear pitches, and you are jarred.

See how serenely a man meets a bump. One knee bends easily, lifting its leg. The other leg is not affected; equilibrium is undisturbed. The knee, not the body, takes the jar.

Now, 1934—no more I-beam axle, no stiff springs. The wheel, flexibly mounted on its own soft spring, rises and falls like a knee to soak up the shocks, while the car glides on.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

Today is a big, big day in the lives of our 50 some debutantes for from luncheon time—1:30—until late tomorrow morning they'll be dashing from luncheon to dinner and then on to the Cinderella Ball.

And in the bargain there's a debut today with pretty Sally Jane Fields doing the bowing. Her mother presented her today at a luncheon in the Twentieth Century Club.

Thanksgiving-time flowers and yellow tapers decorated the attractive luncheon table, and the bud's gift bouquets added to the festive air of the clubhouse.

In Black And White

Sally is another deb who has found black and white irresistible. She wore an afternoon frock having a high-waisted black crepe skirt and a blouse of white bagheera, draped in cowl fashion high in front and lower in back. And the sleeves, dolman fashion, were wide and long and tight-fitting at the wrist. With it she wore a diminutive black velvet hat with a provocative little veil and a corsage of gardenias.

Her mother appeared in a black velvet afternoon gown with a hat to match, and had a corsage of gardenias.

Dance For Buds

Tonight before the ball Mrs. Carl H. Borntraeger will give a dinner for 100 honoring debs Florence Willock and Margery Hillman, in the University Club. It's "dinner at eight!"

And then tonight will come that great event—the Cinderella Ball, with proud fathers and mothers and uncles and aunts taking boxes around the ballroom floor for the deb show.

By the way, Mrs. Roberdeau Green Annan (Elizabeth Leovy) tells me that more people are going to the ball tonight than there've been since the heydays of 1929.

After the ball is over, debs will catch a few winks of sleep, and appear, miraculously, fresh and dewy at the dance Charles Edmund Beeson will give Thanksgiving night to present his charming young daughter, Analana, to society—the place is the Fox Chapel Golf Club.

Analana To Bow

And between the dance and a bit of Thanksgiving dinner, there'll be a tea for the debs. Mrs. Thomas J. McKay and her daughter, Betty, will entertain in their home honoring three of the debs—Gretchen Lappe, Margery Hillman and Maria Wilson.

After "Coq d'Or" Thanksgiving night in Syria Mosque, Rita Borntraeger, daughter of the Carl H. Borntraegers, will dash for a New York train.

She'll attend the Yale-Princeton game in the East Saturday. Harriet Fickes and her family, the E. S. Fickeses, will leave tomorrow night for New York, and Rita will join them at the St. Regis.

The latest addition to the debutante list is Helen Ruth Deike, daughter of the George H. Deikes, of Sheridan avenue, whose parents will present her at a tea dance on December 29.

World Jews United By Hitler, Wise Tells Council

"It must be remembered that although hysteria is on the side of Hitler, history is on the side of Israel," was the closing sentence in the brilliant, forceful address given yesterday by James Waterman Wise before Pittsburgh Section, National Council of Jewish Women.

Discussing "The Jew and the American Scene," Mr. Wise spoke of conditions as he had heard of them at the London conference for the relief of Jews in Germany, to which he was a delegate. So completely is the country possessed by the psychosis that the Jews are responsible for its defeat, that there is no future for the Jew in Germany and no Jew must be condemned to remain there, Mr. Wise said.

No matter what crimes may be on his head, Hitler and the swastika can take credit for uniting the Jews of the world more thoroughly than all the rabbis and the five-pointed star, the speaker observed.

Not expulsion, he believes, not exile, nor spiritual, psychical nor physical suffering is the great tragedy of the Jews in Germany; the profound tragedy is that they were without the rich creative life within themselves that the Jews of other centuries have had.

Mr. Wise spoke of anti-Jewish movements in America and criticized those Jewish families who "de-Judaize" their children and make life difficult for them by sending them into a Gentile world without pride in their race and its history. Jewish influence should be, not a negative, but a positive, creative thing, he declared.

As for a boycott of Germany, he said he considers it so inevitable as to be beyond discussion.

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

One thousand tickets have already been sold for the merchants and manufacturers' sample fair which the Crafton Junior Woman's Club will have the evenings of December 7 and 8 in the Crafton Athletic Association Building. The affair, which is sponsored by the Business Men's Association of the borough, is to be a benefit for the juniors' welfare work and is under the chairmanship of Miss Nora Willetts and Mrs. E. L. Hofmann.

On Tuesday the club will give the first mother and daughter banquet in its history. It's to take place in the United Presbyterian Church with Senior Girl Scouts as special guests and the program will be under the general head of "Religion" in keeping with the season's theme "Phases of the American Home."

A legend of Christmas will be told by Miss Kathryn Burg, carols from other lands will be sung by the club choral, a Christmas story will be related by Kathryn MacLean and the drama committee will complete the program with a play, "Mimi Lights the Candle."

December 29 is the date for the club's annual formal dance in the Hotel Schenley.

Medical Auxiliary's Evening Party Friday

The annual evening party of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Allegheny Medical Society will be held Friday evening at the College Club. There will be dancing, bridge and a buffet supper. Mrs. Homer W. Grimm is general chairman, with these committee heads assisting: Mrs. John A. Heberling, reservations; Mrs. Charles G. Eicher, novelties; Mrs. Jay G. Linn, arrangements; Mrs. John R. Conover, prizes; Mrs. David B. Ludwig, cards and tallies, and Mrs. W. T. Mitchell, Jr., press.

Crafton Girl Scouts' Cakes Going to Needy

Cakes made to obtain cooking credits by Crafton Girl Scouts were submitted for judgment by the school home economic department this morning. And later these credit-aspiring products will be packed into the Thanksgiving baskets which are to be distributed to Crafton's needy families. Mrs. M. C. Brandwyk is troop leader.

Miss Frances Messer Married in Albany

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Messer, of Jenny Lind avenue, McKeesport, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Frances Messer, to Samuel D. Kohn, son of Daniel Kohn, of Albany, N. Y., which was solemnized on November 20 in New York.

Junior Hadassah's Formal Dance December 13

Wednesday evening, December 13, is the date set for the annual formal dance to be given by Junior Hadassah in the Schenley tel. Miss Ada Spiegle is general chairman.

The regular meeting of Junior Hadassah will take place Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Y. M. & W. H. A. Dr. Herman Hailperin, of the Tree of Life Congregation, will speak on "What Can World Jewry Expect from Palestine Now?" Violin music will be provided by Clarence Gordon, accompanied by his sister, Miss Kitty Gordon. Miss Blanche Moskowitz will present current events.

Drama League Sponsoring Meeting for Teachers

Sponsored by the Pittsburgh Drama League, drama teachers of the district will meet at a Dutch treat luncheon in Kaufmann's on Saturday. Luncheon is to follow a round table discussion, beginning with methods of exchanging tickets for class plays. Postcard reservations are being made with Miss Matilda Bachmann, Carrick High School.

Federation Broadcast Changed to 5 O'clock

The hour for this week's broadcast by the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women has been changed to 5 o'clock tomorrow. Ross L. Leffler, past president of the Pennsylvania Game Commission and of the International Association of Fish and Game, will be guest speaker, and will have "Geese and Pirates" as his subject.

Circus Feature of Yule Sale of Women's Exchange

The members of the Women's Exchange held their annual Christmas sale yesterday in the home of Mrs. W. L. Jones, Jr., a member of the exchange board.

The most intriguing feature of the sale, for the very small patrons, was the indoor circus. The "hot dog" stand bore airy decorations of gayly colored and silver balloons, and the candy and gift table featured bright Christmas decorations, and many intriguing gifts for mothers and fathers. There were two black cat grab bags, too, and the highlight of the circus was the tumbling act. All the young aides were in costume.

In the main reception room of the house and the hall, were arranged all the other gifts, and most intriguing they were, ranging from luxurious lingerie to table decorations and glorified waste paper baskets to Christmas cakes and candies.

Mrs. William Christopher Robinson, who was there selling, wore one of the smartest gowns. It was of black wool with a diagonal stripe of silver metallic thread, accented at the cuffs and neckline with the same material in deep red, and her small hat was of black velvet.

Miss Neil Stewart was presiding over her table, despite her recent illness, and Mrs. William Zang was there, and among the shoppers was Mrs. Zang's daughter, Mrs. George C. Stephenson.

At another table was Ellen McClay in an afternoon frock of black crepe and satin, with a most fascinating jacket of black edged with white satin, an adaptation of the knitted shoulderettes of grandmother's day, but Ellen's was very 1933 indeed.

FAVORITE M'NAIR DISH RECIPE GIVEN

Both requests and answers to requests for recipes are found in Prudence Penny's daily load of mail. From Elizabeth D. Bruce comes a prize winning reply to Mayor-elect McNair's desire for "a good dish of schnitz and knepp."

She, in turn, would like the recipe for fastnachts, an unsweetened doughnut.

There are some excellent suggestions for Thanksgiving in today's list. Date sticks, asparagus delight, turkey soup, roast goose, and angel spice cake will be sure to fit in with the day's cooking plans either individually or collectively.

Send in your recipes to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, for every day she awards one $5 prize and 10 prizes of $1 each.

Due to the large number received, no recipes will be returned.

DATE STICKS

One cup dates (cut and floured).
One-half cup nut meats.
Two tablespoons shortening (one ounce).
One cup sugar.
One cup flour.
One teaspoon baking powder.
Two tablespoons hot water.
Two eggs, well beaten.
One teaspoon vanilla.

Blend sugar and butter, add eggs and beat vigorously. Add water, then flour in which baking powder has been added. Then add dates, nuts and vanilla. Bake 25 minutes in 350 to 375 degrees oven in a nine-inch square pan. Let cool, cut in strips and roll in powdered sugar.

TEN $1 PRIZ[illegible]NERS

WM. J. BROWN,
Box 65, Dunlevy.
ANGEL SPICE CAKE

One and one-fourth cups egg whites.
One teaspoon cream of tartar.
One and one-half cups sugar.
One cup cake flour.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One teaspoon cinnamon.
One-half teaspoon nutmeg.
One-fourth teaspoon cloves.
One-fourth teaspoon allspice.
One teaspoon vanilla.

Beat the egg whites with a beater until frothy. Add the cream of tartar and continue beating until they hold a point. Add the sugar gradually, having sifted it three times. Fold in the flour, which has been sifted, measured, then sifted four times with salt and spices. Add the flour mixture a little at a time and blend carefully. Add the vanilla. Pour in angel cake pan. Bake 30 minutes in slow oven about 325 degrees. This cake is best if baked the day before serving. Ice with any favorite icing, or serve with whipped cream sweetened with chopped orange marmalade, one and one-half cups of whipping cream.

MRS. SARA LOWTHER,
9½ Norton street, Mt. Washington Station
VEGETABLE LOAF

Three tablespoons melted fat.
Two cups soft bread crumbs.
One cup chopped celery, cooked 10 minutes.
One cup diced cooked carrots.
One-half cup chopped walnut meats.
One cup cooked canned peas, or string beans.
Four tablespoons liquid from vegetables.
Two eggs, beaten.
One teaspoon salt and a few grains of pepper.

Mix the fat with the bread crumbs, reserve one-fourth cup, and to remainder add vegetables and other ingredients. Mix thoroughly, form into a loaf on waxed paper, cover the top with the bread crumbs (in reserve) and garnish with whole walnut meats. Place on a rack in an uncovered pan and bake in a moderate oven, 350-400 degrees F., for 30 minutes. (An excellent substitute for meat).

MRS. MAGDALENE HERMAN,
700 Woodbourne Ave., Brookline.
ROAST GOOSE

Select a young goose, about eight pounds, draw and wash well inside and out, wipe dry, then singe. Season well inside with salt and pepper rubbed in, then fill with the following dressing:

One loaf stale bread (white bread).
One and one-half cups chopped onions.
One and one-half cups chopped celery.
Two tablespoons melted butter.
Two eggs.
Salt and pepper to taste.
One cup cold water.

Break bread in small pieces, moisten with cold water, add chopped onions, celery, melted butter, eggs (well beaten) and salt and pepper to taste. After filling and sewing up, rub salt and pepper on outside, gash breast three times on each side, put into covered roaster, with pint of water, add giblets, cook covered one hour in medium oven, remove cover and roast for two hours longer, basting every 15 minutes. Roasting process takes three hours. Serve with apple sauce or cranberries if desired. My husband preferred sauerkraut, which I cooked with some of the goose fat browned first, and then added a little water and steamed slowly about one hour. Duck may be prepared as above and is delicious, too.

MRS. INGA ALLEN,
8007 Susquehanna street,
Wilkinsburg.
SHRIMP DE LUXE

Five tablespoons melted butter.
Six tablespoons flour.
Three cups milk.
One teaspoon salt.
One-fourth teaspoon paprika.
One and one-half cups shrimp.
One-half cup cooked mushrooms.
Three tablespoons chopped green pepper.
Three tablespoons chopped pimentos.
Three tablespoons chopped cooked celery.
One egg, well beaten.

Melt butter and add flour. Blend and add milk, cook until creamy. Add seasoning, shrimps and mushrooms. Cook one minute. Add egg and cook one minute. Serve at once on six pieces hot toast.

MRS. W. J. LESLIE,
304 Third street, Leechburg.
ASPARAGUS DELIGHT

Make a white sauce, using two tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons of flour and one cup of milk. Cook slowly until thick and smooth, then season with salt and pepper and add one-third cup of grated cheese, stirring until the cheese melts. Either canned or fresh asparagus is used. In a buttered casserole lay a thick layer of bread crumbs, add a layer of asparagus, cover with sauce, then add another layer of asparagus and sauce until all are used. Top with bread crumbs, dot with butter and brown in oven.

MISS JESSIE GRIGG,
Box 335, Ellsworth.
POTATO EGGS

Two or medium-sized potatoes.
One tablespoon butter.
One medium-sized onion.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Dash of pepper.

Mix all these ingredients together and form into egg-shaped balls. Then beat one egg very fine and brush over potato balls. After being dipped in egg, dip in fine bread or cracker crumbs and fry in deep fat. Drain on absorbing paper and garnish with a little parsley.

ELIZABETH BRUCE,
902 Sandusky street,
SCHNITZ AND KNEPP

One pint dried apples.
Two tablespoons sugar.
One teaspoon salt.
Butter, size of an egg.

Boil until apples are soft; sift together one cup flour, one level teaspoon of baking powder, and a pinch of salt. Mix thoroughly with cold water and one egg; let the doube be so stiff that it can hardly be stirred with a spoon; drop by small teaspoonfuls between apples. Put on lid and boil briskly for 10 minutes. Serve at once. A small piece of smoked pork may be used instead of butter if preferred.

MRS. OLIVIA SREDERICK,
7525 Kensington street.
DEVILED CRABS

One pint large flake crab meat.
One-half pint of bread crumbs (not grated).
One hard-boiled egg.
One-fourth cup of finely chopped celery.
Salt and cayenne pepper to taste.
Butter the size of a walnut (melted).

Separate crab meat, but do not shred. Chip white of egg, mash yolk. Mix crab meat, egg, celery, bread crumbs, add melted butter and seasoning. Pack into clean, dry crab shells. Sprinkle with grated bread crumbs. Dot with butter. Sprinkle lightly with paprika. Bake about 15 minutes or until light brown. This quantity makes six large servings, that is, fills six large shells.

MRS. D. J. KING,
22 Barton Mill road, Uniontown.
ASSORTED BUTTERSCOTCH COOKIES

Three-fourths cup butter.
Three cups brown sugar.
Three eggs.
One tablespoon vanilla.
Three-fourths teaspoon soda.
Three-fourths teaspoon cream of tartar.
Five cups flour.

Cream the butter and sugar together, add the beaten eggs, vanilla and mix in the dry ingredients that have been sifted together. Now divide the dough into half and divide one of the halves into half again. To one-fourth of the dough add one cup cocoanut; to another one-fourth add one-half cup black walnuts. Leave the remaining half plain. Form these into three separate rolls, wrap in waxed paper and store in the refrigerator until a convenient time to bake (at least eight hours). When ready to bake, slice the cocoanut and walnut mixtures very thinly and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) until a golden brown.

MRS. L. COSTELLO,
4639 Plummer street
TURKEY SOUP

Bones and trimmings of turkey.
One bay leaf.
One-fourth cup minced onion.
One-half cup diced carrot.
Two quarts of cold water.
Grated rind of half a lemon.
One tablespoon minced parsley.
One-fourth cup macaroni rings.
One tablespoon catsup.
One teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.
Two tablespoons flour.
Two teaspoons salt.
One-fourth teaspoon pepper.

Break the bones of the turkey after all the meat has been removed, use all bits of gristle and skin that cannot be utilized in any other way. Put in a kettle with the vegetables, water, bay leaf, salt and pepper, cover and sit simmer for one and one-half hours. Strain, pressing the vegetables through the sieve as much as possible. Return to fire, add the macaroni rings and cook until tender. About 12 minutes. Add catsup and Worcestershire sauce and thicken with the flour smoothed to a paste in one-fourth cup of water. Garnish the soup with minced parsley and serve with crackers.

To Gain Popularity One Should Study Others

Do you feel lonely, unwanted?

Do you strive, desperately, for fun, friends, dates, only to find yourself left high and dry?

Then you'll sympathize with Sue, for that's the fix she's in.

What's wrong? Listen!

Dear Miss Robinson:

You've helped so many other people that I am encouraged to think you can help me, too.

Here is my problem—and I guess plenty of other girls have it, too. I am 17, not bad-looking and I try very hard to be friendly and cheerful. But for all that I am not popular, and I have no friends.

I belong to a few clubs, but I am more lonesome with the "bunch" than when I stay home. I am left out of the conversation, and when I do try to join in the others stop talking, or leave the room. This has happened so often that I am getting so I am afraid to open my mouth. I am terribly unhappy.

The only time I am ever invited out is as "second choice." Yet I am sure I would make a good companion, because I am agreeable, and I can stay out later than most girls. I never have to hurry home to cook supper, or anything of that sort, and I try terribly hard to make a good impression on people.

WANTS POPULARITY

Now they are calling me "high hat," and they tell me I act as if I were bored with the world. But I don't feel that way at all. I am quiet, and don't say much, because I always seem to say things at the wrong time or something.

I long to be popular. I long to have fun, and have people want me around. I try so hard to be friendly!

Won't you please tell me what is wrong? I am willing to try anything to gain popularity. Life just isn't worth living this way. I see other girls enjoying themselves, and it makes me sick. Please help me. SUE.

What is wrong?

If I'm not mistaken, Sue is what's wrong with Sue. Sue thinking about Sue—and nobody else. You long to be popular, so Sue can be happy. Have you ever had one good, honest thought about making other people happy? I'll gamble you haven't! You've been entirely absorbed in what was going to happen to Sue, and what impression Sue was making.

STUDY OTHERS

And why should other folks want you around when Sue is all you're thinking of?

Why do you always "say things at the wrong time?" That's why! You've never taken any pains to think about other folks' feelings—what would hurt them or make them unhappy. You've just blurted out what Sue thought, regardless. And, naturally, if you're not interested in other people, they're not interested in you.

So—right about face, youngster! Quit thinking about Sue. Quit being envious of popular girls and begin to study them. What do they do to make people want 'em around? They help other people to feel popular. They study other people. They've learned to live with other lives, to be gay and friendly.

In short, they've learned to give as well as to get.

Try it, youngster! You'll be surprised!

By FAY KING

Few in life have accomplished the things they wished most to do.

Nearly all who have succeeded more or less in their own lines have had greater ambitions in other directions.

Not that they like their own work less, but that they aspired even more to something else.

Personally I have always wanted to paint and, next to that, write a book.

I've daubed with paints, and may say my feeblest results pleased me more than anything I might ever accomplish in my own line.

Book writing I have put off indefinitely, but some day I am going to write one. Not for publication, but for my own pleasure.

I'm going to letter it by hand, illustrate it myself, and have it bound!

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

We go dramatic in our new evening wraps. A most striking wrap is of brown velvet, very long, straight and slim in front, but in voluminous folds at the side, the fullness coming from a yoke at the hips. It has a large ruff collar of mink.

A transformation scene is not difficult with some of the new frocks. One simple, but smart model of black silk crepe has a detachable vestee-plastron of white studded with gold embroidery. This has extended shoulders and is worn with a belt of the dress fabric. When removed the dress is a simple black silk frock.

Accept that invitation for the children and let your little girl go to the party wearing a dainty frock. A nice model is of orchid colored crepe de Chine with knife pleatings used to give width at shoulders and hips, without endangering the girlish line of the model.

Household Hints

A dash of vinegar in the pot in which corned beef is being cooked will make the meat more tender and improve the flavor.

The kitchen offers excellent play materials, provided mother is willing to let the child explore accessible cupboards. The child enjoys fitting pots and lids together, putting small pots inside of larger ones. He likes to examine colanders and strainers, and invents wonderful games with wooden clothespins.

Place a small piece of butter in the pan in which you are boiling white potatoes if you do not wish them to boil to pieces.

Cretonne sunshades can be laundered to look like new. Open the sunshade, moisten it with warm, soapy water, and beginning at the top and working to the edge, gently scrub the material with a nail brush and soap. Use clean warm water, adding salt to brighten the colors, for removing the soap.

A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

Madge Suspects Avis Will Cause Trouble at Wedding

I found myself shaking with a combination of nerves and anger as I waited for Avis Arlen to answer the ultimatum I had given her concerning her bridesmaid's gown. But I had no intention of giving in to the girl, whose impudence I felt was colossal. I did not care in that moment what Philip Veritzen's reaction would be to my stern measures with Avis, for whose invitation to be a bridesmaid he had asked.

It did not seem possible that any girl could be so thick-skinned as to persist in being bridesmaid, or even in attending the wedding, after the curt language I had been forced to use to her. I know that almost any other girl would have flown into a rage and refused to come to the wedding.

But not Avis Arlen.

"Oh, dear Mrs. Graham," she cooed, "how could you misunderstand me so? I did not understand that it mattered so much, so small a wedding, so hurried the preparations."

I bit my lip to keep back an angry retort at this mean-spirited slur upon Mary's wedding, but I knew that she was giving in, and I could afford to be generous—and silent.

"If you'll just tell me where I am to go, and what I am to do, I shall obey you implicitly," she said.

"Thank you," I answered, making my voice cordial again, and then repeated my directions for her meeting with Helena Brixton.

"I am sorry to have appeared harsh, Avis," I said apologetically as I finished, "but I simply could not grant your request."

"Oh, that is perfectly all right," she said, and I could not blame her for a certain loftiness in her tone. "Pray do not think of it again. What time will I get the gown?"

WANTS TO SEE NOEL

"You will not have to bother about that at all," I said. "Mrs. Brixton will attend to everything. Do just as she says, and then plan to take the train reaching Bridgehampton at 1:30. Better get your hair done in the city. We'll have a competent woman here who can put anything straight that has gone awry."

"How wonderfully you have planned everything!" she said. "But don't hesitate to tell me if I can save Mrs. Brixton any trouble with those gowns. I could easily bring out my own that day, you know."

"Of course," I agreed easily, "but it isn't necessary. Now I must ask you to excuse me. Please remember me kindly to your mother. I am looking forward with much pleasure to seeing her again at the wedding. Remember, we are meeting you at Bridgehampton at 1:30, day after tomorrow."

"Who will meet us?" she asked sharply. "Oh, dear Mrs. Graham, don't you think you could manage so that No-el could meet us? There is something I must say to No-el, something I must explain. It is terribly important to me, and to him."

LILLIAN AMUSED

"I do not know who can meet you, Avis," I said quietly, although I again had the primitive impulse to reach across the miles of space and manhandle her. "But someone will be there. Good-bye." I hung up the receiver and turned to find Lillian at my elbow with a small cup of steaming coffee, creamed and sugared to my liking.

"Drink this before you do another thing," she said. "You look as if you were ready to drop."

"I am," I said, taking the coffee gratefully. "That girl is really—"

"Don't say it!" Lillian advised, grinning. "You wouldn't be able to say your prayers tonight, you'd have so many naughty words on your conscience."

"I know it," I admitted, smiling ruefully.

"But she gave in, I noticed," Lillian said triumphantly. "Now the rest of the telephoning can wait. I'm sure, until after breakfast. Let's see. You want to warn Helena about keeping that gown away from Avis, and you want to ask Phil to send Otto down for Carolyn and Marion. You can't get Helena until she arrives in the city, and it would be worth anybody's life to get Phil Veritzen up at this hour. So come on and get your breakfast."

I hesitated, and Lillian looked at me sharply.

"Don't tell me you have anything else on the well-known bean," she said.

"I have to telephone Edith Fairfax," I said miserably.

Contract Bridge -:-

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

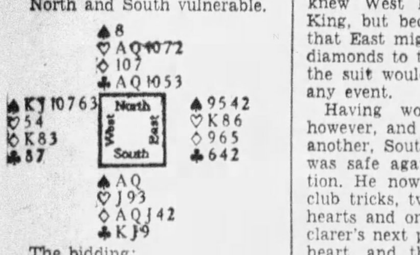
Refusing Tricks

It may be laid down as a general principle of sound play at the Bridge table that unless a player has a sound reason for refusing to win a trick which it is possible to win, that trick should be taken. There are plenty of situations in which a player should not be in too much of a hurry to cash possible tricks but if you refuse to win a trick when you can do so, you must have some reason other than a whim of the moment or a Micawber-like belief that "something will turn up" that will allow your side to profit by your refusal.

A hand which gives point to this discussion occurred recently in a rubber game in the experts' room at a bridge club in New York. The hand was:

South, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
6 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's bid of six notrump may appear slightly over-ambitious. Actually it was dictated by two considerations, the first being that he held a perfect fit with the club bid and a reasonable fit with the hearts, and the second, that it appeared certain to him that the hand should be played by him in order to gain time by preventing a spade lead or, if the spade lead were made, in any event to assure 2 tricks in that suit.

West appreciated that nothing could be gained and something might be lost by opening a spade against a six-notrump declaration. He therefore decided to make a waiting lead, and, with nothing in particular to guide the choice except the fact that he held the eight-seven of clubs as against the five-four of hearts, decided to lead through Dummy's announced strength in clubs rather than through Dummy's announced strength in hearts.

The Declarer won the first trick with the Ace of clubs in Dummy, and immediately led a diamond toward the closed hand. East, of course, played a low diamond, and South finessed. West now refused to win the trick. Superficially the play may not appear bad, but as a matter of fact it was one of those partially thought-out plays which must be condemned upon further consideration. Obviously South must have either the heart suit solid or the club suit solid on the basis of his bidding, but there is still a chance, and a very good one, if West wins the diamond trick, that the Declarer must lose another trick in one of the suits bid by North. There is practically no chance of defeating the contract if he fails to do so.

As soon as West refused to win the diamond South discontinued the suit, not because he knew West had the diamond King, but because he reasoned that East might well have four diamonds to the King and thus the suit would fail to break in any event.

Having won one diamond, however, and being sure of yet another, South knew the hand was safe against any distribution. He now could count five club tricks, two diamonds, four hearts and one spade. The Declarer's next play was to lead a heart, and though the finesse lost to East's King, West never won a trick in either the spade or diamond suit. Obviously it was out of the question to win a trick in spades but the diamond trick, which was refused, would have proved to be the setting trick as South in no way could have made 12 tricks without a successful finesse in either hearts or diamonds.

Today's Question

Neither side vulnerable. The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♣	?

You, South, hold:

♠ K1096 ♡ 4 ◇ AJ72 ♣ 9862

What do you bid?

Answer: Two spades. If East had not made an intervening Overcall, a three-spade bid, although not good, would be excusable. Since East made an intervening two-club bid, you are giving a free Raise and you need not have any fear that you are underbidding your hand. If your partner passes, no game will be missed, as he should make an effort to bid again on fewer additional values than he would had you merely given him a single Raise without an intervening Overcall.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Bride's Initials

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me what initials I am to use on my table linen? I am to be married soon and I do not know whether to only use the initials of my first and last names, which would make the initials P. T., or whether I should add the initials of the last name of my husband-to-be—like P. T. K. R.

I am one of the ones who believe very thoroughly in the tradition and convention of using the initials of the maiden name of the bride-to-be, in all things that are monogrammed before the wedding. It's a very sensible tradition, very logical . . and, after all, the initials of the fiance do not belong to the bride-to-be before the wedding.

However, some brides-to-be prefer to add the initial of the surname of the husband-to-be . . . and so you will have to make your own choice about this.

Key to the Situation

Dear Miss Beeckman:

1—When a girl is escorted home by a boy friend, is it proper for the girl to hand the key to the boy to open the door, or for the girl to open the door?

2—When a girl is having a boy call at the house, is it proper for the girl herself to go to the door to greet him or another member of the family?

TROUBLED.

1—The boy who knows what's what in the world of manners will ask the girl for the key, and will open the door for her. If he doesn't make this mannerly gesture, she will probably accept the omission, and open the door herself.

2—This depends on the family convenience. The girl shouldn't expect some member of her family to "service" her when they are busy and when, after all, she should make this call her concern as to answering the door bell.

SHIRTWAISTS CONTINUE TO BE HIGH STYLE

Both these costumes show the increasing popularity of the contrasting blouse and skirt vogue. The buttons are a smart note.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

TRIG clothes that have a country look about their cut and material are heading South these days. New fabrics that never before had the honor, such as mattress covering and denim, are in the picture, contributed by imaginative designers who see the possibilities of getting off the gingham and linen paths now and then.

It looks as if the shirtwaist frock which climbed to new highs in clothes for the North is to carry on to fresh triumphs below the Mason Dixon line.

For yesteryear's shirtwaist frock was a more or less active sports model. Later models show a definite line between skirt and blouse which puts them into a dressier class.

THERE is no feeling of a handy, practical wash frock to them: they are not so casual as all that. In fact, they will be swell to wear at casino and beach club luncheons during the top of the season, just as one went for boucle or white serge suits a few seasons ago.

Sometimes a jacket accompanies the shirtwaist frock, in stuff to match the skirt. As many others are costumes in themselves, to be worn with or without top-coats.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Bursitis Is Medical Name for 'Housemaid's Knee'

Some of the medical and scientific names applied to various afflictions and disorders of the body are quite different from the names used in everyday speech. For example, "chronic bursitis" is the medical term for an annoying disturbance which is usually spoken of as "water on the knee," or "housemaid's knee." The latter name can be traced to the prevalence of this disorder among housemaids.

Dr. Copeland

As its name implies, chronic bursitis is an inflammation of the membrane surrounding the knee joint. Each joint of the body is surrounded by a bag or cap called a bursa. Within the bursa is the "synovial fluid," which makes possible easy motion of the joint. The synovial fluid is in reality a lubricating substance.

This form of inflammation, or bursitis, can usually be traced to a blow, a fall or some prolonged irritation. This explains the common occurrence of the disorder among scrub women and housemaids, whose constant kneeling for floor cleaning sets up an irritation of the membrane covering the joint. Football players and other athletes may develop this disorder when they receive severe blows or injuries of the knee joint.

Rest in bed is the most beneficial treatment. The knee should be placed in a well-padded splint. The swelling can often be lessened by the application of ice bags. Some cases are benefited by a hot poultice or wet dressing.

Though rest is very helpful, it is always best to seek medical advice. It may be necessary to "tap" the swollen joint and draw off some of the accumulated fluid. When pus is present, an operation is necessary. Do not hesitate if this is advised. It is a simple procedure and need cause no alarm.

The tissues are punctured and all the pus is evacuated. Further accumulation of pus is prevented by the insertion of one of two temporary drains within the wound. When pus no longer forms, the infection clears up and the drains are removed.

Often, after the acute pain and discomfort disappear, the knee is still stiff and difficult to move. For this reason gentle massage of the weakened knee is advised. Occasionally, baking or electrical treatment is recommended to restore the normal motion and nimbleness of the joint.

Never neglect bursitis. Bear in mind that an acute inflammation of the knee joint responds to treatment, while a chronic inflammation is difficult to cure. Prompt attention saves many days of unnecessary suffering.

Answers to Health Queries

Thank You. Q.—What causes trench mouth and what do you advise for it?

A.—This is due to infection. Have your doctor outline the proper treatment.

M. G. Q.—What do you advise for a discharging ear?

A.—This condition should have proper medical attention. It would be well to consult an ear specialist.

Mrs. M. K. B. Q.—What causes mastoids?

A.—This is usually due to infection. A neglected head cold or a running ear may be responsible.

A. F. L. Q.—What can be done for itching of the body? There is no rash.

A. This may be due to nervousness or to irritation from some food. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Tracy, Moore In Family

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Colleen Moore, who not so many years ago ranked among the very highest of the boxoffice attractions, returns to the screen with a few unsatisfying bits in "The Power and Glory," now having its first Pittsburgh screening in the Harris Family Theater in East Liberty.

The star of the picture is Spencer Tracy in the role of Tom Gordon, a ruthless railroad head.

Through the eyes of Henry (Ralph Morgan), his secretary and childhood chum, we are given the picture of the inner story of the man whom most people hate. It all begins with Tom Gordon's funeral and then leads us back through the years with Henry, now an old man, telling us the story.

The incidents wander back and forth through Gordon's life, just as an old man's reminiscing would be expected to wander. The faithful secretary loved his master and he tries to justify this love to his wife.

Wig Demand Makes Hair Scarce

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 29.—Don't be surprised if 1934 goes down in history as the year of the great hair famine.

Pere Westmore, one of the redoubtable family who supervise Hollywood's makeup and wigs, predicts that it will if women continue the fad of using extra pieces to secure varieties of coiffure.

Miss Dietrich

"It's bound to come, too," he said, "Women change everything else, even their rouge, for evening wear. Why should they wear the same coiffure they did in the kitchen or on a shopping tour?"

For the last two years, the Westmores have been buying all the human hair they could get hold of. They now have more than a ton of it stored against the time when the general public clamors for extra pieces, wigs and toupees.

"Russia has stopped shipping hair, the peasantry has gone bobbed," declares Westmore. "Germany also has slipped down to nothing. There is some hair to be bought in this country, but the most of it comes from Italy."

In Hollywood alone, the Westmores do $100,000 worth of hair business yearly. Marlene Dietrich, for instance, wears 15 wigs in "Catherine the Great." Some of the wigs used by feminine stars cost as much as $200. Toupees, and you'd be surprised to know how many male stars wear them, run about $50.

It needs only a concerted demand by the public to put human hair at a premium.

The screen's newest croonet find, Russ Columbo, begs to say that it wasn't serious between him and Miss Dell either.

"Dorothy is a very sweet girl and I saw her a number of times in New York, but we weren't engaged," said the star.

Incidentally, Dorothy showed up at the Colony Club Saturday night with Jerry Horwin.

Mr. Von Sternberg

Joseph Von Sternberg, they'll tell you, runs him a close second. The other day they were rehearsing a scene for the Marlene Dietrich picture when the director suddenly stopped and shouted to Bert Glennon, the cameraman:

"Bert, why on earth are you doing that?"

Everyone looked blank, and then it dawned. Glennon had been winding his wrist watch.

A careless baker, who switched deliveries, last week caused Mrs. Boris Karloff her most embarrassing moment. The Hollywood matron had ordered a cake and had invited some of Karloff's fellow cricket players out to help celebrate the actor's birthday.

Time came for the piece-de-resistance, the serving of the cake. A puzzled maid brought in the platter and put it on the table. It bore a tiny cake with three candles. On the icing was written: "Baby K."

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The Nixon will celebrate Thanksgiving Day by throwing open its box-office for the sale of seats for next week's engagement of Eva Le Gallienne and her Civic Repertory Theater Company. There will be five performances of "Alice in Wonderland" the first half of the week, and both matinees, "Romeo And Juliet" will be the bill Thursday and Friday, with Miss Le Gallienne as Juliet. She will be seen in the title role of Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" Saturday night. Josephine Hutchinson, who originated the Alice lead in New York, will be seen in it here, with Miss Gallienne as the White Queen. There are 20 scenes in "Alice in Wonderland," the setting and costumes of which are reproductions from the drawing made for the book by Sir John Tenniel, for years chief cartoonist of "Punch," noted humorous publication of London.

Billie Burke (Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld) is expected to fly from Hollywood to Pittsburgh for the opening of the new Ziegfeld "Follies" here December 11. The week in the Nixon will be the last prior to the New York opening. The new revue had its premiere in Boston, where it played two successful weeks, and it is now completing its second week in Philadelphia. Its further travels include Washington, Pittsburgh and then New York. One song feature of the show is "The Last Round-Up," which was written for the "Follies" by Billy Hill. Although it is now familar through radio repetition, it is retained as a production number, sung by Don Ross, including a burlesque by Willie and Eugene Howard, Ross and Jack Pepper.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Last On the Bill

FOR THE last time that evening the curtain went up. The orchestra swung into a vague medley as the leader smiled invitingly at that blonde in an upper box. On to the stage stepped the Great Yorick, "vaudeville's favorite juggler."

On Yorick's face there lingered the same prop smile he always employed while running through his act. But deep in his heart, for the thousandth time, there was that terrible feeling of hatred and contempt for the audience to which he was playing.

There wasn't much of an audience left. Not now. As usual, most of the customers were walking out on him. In twos and fours they were filing toward the exists without so much as a backward glance.

All through the vaudeville bill that audience had remained contentedly seated. They had applauded the song and dance team, the magician and the two crooners. They had whistled their appreciation of the flash act. They had even laughed heartily at that phony comedian and his jokes of grandma's day.

Yes, that had been a kind audience. But kind only to the other acts. Now that George Yorick, without doubt one of the greatest jugglers in the racket, was performing, the customers couldn't leave quickly enough. He was doing his best to entertain. But as far as they were concerned, the show was over.

"Pigs!" he muttered. "Swine!"

But on his face there was that same prop smile. Deftly, as though he were playing to enthused faces instead of vanishing backs, he went through his complete routine. He finished with his most difficult trick.

The curtain came down and was raised once. Yorick bowed. The orchestra played loudly. There was no applause. The curtail fell again.

And the orchestra leader, noting that the blonde had disappeared, sighed heavily and prepared to go home to his wife . . .

Backstage the Great Yorick climbed the three flights that led to his small dressing room and flung open the door. Abrams, his agent, was waiting for him. Abrams was a large man. He affected red ties and his face was the color of a weary oyster.

This was Saturday night. Abrams was always around when Yorick was in town on Saturday nights. This was pay night, commission night.

"'Lo, George," said Abrams. "Just thought I'd drop around and see—"

His voice trailed off as Yorick glared at him.

"Well, did you see? Did you see how they walked out on me again? Did you see how I closed the bill again? Do you see how I am on the verge of insanity because of this thing?

"I am a great juggler. I know that. I am the best. All my life I struggled to be just that. I never married because I wanted my art to be the only thing in my life. But what has happened? I am at the top of my profession—and the bottom of the bill.

"I can't stand it much longer, Abrams. I'm warning you, I am near the end. Unless you can put me somewhere but at the end of a bill, I—I won't be responsible for my actions."

The agent nodded slowly.

"I know just how you feel, George," he agreed, "and I wish there was somethin' I could do about it. But what can I do? No matter how you look at it you're just a juggler. And there never was a juggler yet that didn't open or close the show. You're the closin' kind.

"You got talent. Plenty of it. If you didn't, I wouldn't of been able to book you all these years. But it's a peculiar kind of talent, 'cause you can go so far and no further. You gotta make up your mind, George Yorick, that you're a closing act—and that you'll be a closing act until the day you die."

Whereupon the Great Yorick did a strange thing. He went to his trousers, removed three bills from a pocket and slapped them down in front of Abrams. Then he talked, swiftly and to the point.

"There's your last commission for two years. I'm quitting now for that long, and then I'll show you how much of a closing performer I am. I have enough money to last me, and I'm going to use it to invent new juggling tricks that will startle the vaudeville world.

"I mean it, Abrams. I'll never be last on the bill again. Get that now. I'll see you in two years. Good night."

"Good night," muttered Abrams. "You're nuts." . . .

The Great Yorick kept his word. Part of it, that is. He packed his things that very night and moved to a small town in Northern New York. There he settled. And there he began his search for higher developments in the art of juggling.

He worked as he had never worked in all his life. He attempted juggling tricks that were seemingly impossible. He worked with sharp knives and heavy tables. He stood on his hands and juggled objects with his feet. He went through a period of self-inflicted torture that was little short of amazing.

And he did it all because he had a definite incentive.

"I'll show them," he kept telling himself over and over. "I'll show them that the Great Yorick need not always be last on the bill."

For almost a year and a half he slaved and he worked. And then, with the goal almost in sight, he developed a severe case of pneumonia. And two weeks later, the Master Booking Agent juggled him into the Beyond . . .

They buried George Yorick in one of the smaller New York cemeteries. They placed him in the family plot. On the tombstone were several names. His father's name, John Yorick, was on top. Next came Martha Yorick, his mother. Then there was Joan Yorick, his late sister. And at the bottom, as the last of his line, was George Yorick.

Alas, poor Yorick. Even in death he was still last on the bill! . . .

Believe It Or Not, Ripley Has An Amazing Show

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Step right up, la-deez and gen-tel-men! Step right up and (stand aside, little boy, and give the folks a chance). As I was saying, good people, step right up while I tell you about the mah-vuls from the four corners of the earth—I'll even make it stronger—I'll say five corners—seven—all of them. Think of it! Amazing wonders from all the corners of the earth, be they seven or 11!

I think that among all the entertaining features of the circus, the sideshow spieler, or ballyhoo man, is a standout in himself, with his glibness and gift of making things seem astounding.

The thought came to me especially when I looked into the Ripley "Believe It Or Not" Odditurioum, 333 Fifth avenue, yesterday, and saw marvels that would amaze even circus announcers of years of experience with the ordinary run of sideshow "freaks."

If one of them ever saw a four-legged and three-armed child it was probably a circus-man's dream, but he could see one (alive and breathing, la-deez and gentel-men), as plenty of people have seen it already, in the Ripley "Believe It Or Not" show. And other strange things that nature has done for or to people, that might cause an envious spasm, since they constitute enough for a dozen sideshows.

The glow of an electric bulb through the throat of a girl who has swallowed it, a man talking without vocal cords, another playing a tune with no instrument except the leaf of a shrub, another lifting a heavy weight hanging from a bar inserted in perforations in his breast, and numerous other queer things of the animate world.

Some are of a comical nature—such as Big-Mouthed Sam, compared to whose mouth the Joe E. Brown facial opening is a mere slit. Sam can put a baseball into his—or four golf balls.

Besides these living believe-it-or-nots there are several hundred inanimate specimens, messages written on rice grains, to be viewed through a magnifying glass, a fiddle made of match-sticks, intricate wood carvings, freaks of vegetation, including a carrot that is such an exact resemblance to a humand hand as to deceive the eye, and hundreds of others of equally interesting nature.

Step right up, la-deez and gen-tel-men and—stand aside, little man, and give the folks—

American Oil Company facilities and American's famous products now dot the road from Maine to Florida and inland—the "Americans" are there.

For some time our company has been very active adapting the facilities taken over in this territory to the handling and sale of its products. A tremendous behind-the-line task.

New equipment and storage at ocean terminals and bulk plants. Company service stations and dealers' pumps and tanks repaired and painted (with more improvements still to be made wherever necessary for quicker and better service). And, what's more, the famous products themselves are now on hand in the pumps ready for delivery to our many friends who travel from Maine to Florida and inland. Here are some of the products:

Orange AMERICAN GAS

—a regular gas—best at regular gas price

Orange AMERICAN GAS has a pure petroleum base. It is always sold for just what it is—a regular gasoline—an honest value, honestly described. Orange AMERICAN GAS always was—and still is—the finest gasoline selling at regular gas price. It is sold from the YELLOW and BLACK PUMP bearing the "AMERICAN GAS" globe.

AMOCO-GAS

—the original special motor fuel!

AMOCO-GAS is the original special motor fuel and sells at a premium over regular gasoline. AMOCO-GAS is regarded as the finest motor fuel on earth, and for nearly two decades many millions of gallons annually had been sold at a 5¢ premium over regular gasoline. It was worth every cent of that premium. Just several months ago, changed economic factors in industry, combined with advantages resulting from our merger with Pan American Petroleum & Transport Company and subsidiaries, made possible a reduction of 40%—2¢ per gallon—in the premium of AMOCO-GAS. The same famous quality has not been changed.

At its reduced premium, AMOCO-GAS is a real bargain. It's different! Its formula is our own exclusive one, employing distinctive expensive ingredients. You get AMOCO-GAS at the GREEN PUMP bearing the "AMOCO" globe.

AMOCO MOTOR OILS

"As good as the gas"—AMOCO Motor Oils. With 100% Pure Paraffine Base, it perfectly lubricates today's high speed motors and older cars, as well.

Most motorists in our old * territory know these products. If you don't know them, try them! You'll find that in their respective fields they offer much more value to you. They are honest values—honestly described.

OPERATOR 13 -:- -:- by Robert W. Chambers

What Has Gone Before

Gail Loveless, an accomplished actress, became a spy in the Union Army, Operator 3. Disguised as a quadroon laundress, she had the good fortune to work at the headquarters of Gen. J. E. B. Stuart, Confederate cavalry leader, who was planning a daring raid into Pennsylvania. She met Capt. Jack Gailliard, clever Southern spy, who felt a shame-faced stirring of his pulses when she was near. Vespasian Chancellor, chief of Confederate spies, distrusted and eventually exposed her.

Fleeing for her life, she disguised herself as a colored boy and rode with Stuart's army as it galloped into Pennsylvania. Chancellor discovered her identity and pursued her, followed by Gailliard. She captured them, but released them when, seeing a Confederate spy hanged by Union troops, she found herself unable to surrender them to such a fate.

In Emmitsburg, Md., Operator 13 discovered Lady Green-sleeves, daring Confederate spy, and tried unsuccessfully to capture her. When Lady Greensleeves fled to take an English blockade-running ship at False Cape, N. C., Operator 13 and two men colleagues pursued her to the very edge of the sea. There, rather than surrender, Lady Greensleeves tried to swim out to a boat and was drowned.

Now start the new episode in the romantic and stirring life of the beautiful girl spy.

An entirely new episode begins today. If you have not been reading "Operator 13," start now and follow this engaging story to the end.

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan production made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

The days of dark confusion drifted by through thickening October and November mists. In them the paling star of McClellan was blotted out. Then Burnside's planet, glimmering briefly above Marye's Heights, faded in the fiery fog of Pelham's guns, sank lower and was washed out in the last wave of blood which strewed the strand with 18,000 dead, marking high tide along the fatal river.

Every time the President meddled, he produced paralysis or suicidal frenzy in his generals. He had not yet learned to pick a leader and let him alone. And, with the downfall of his leaders and his armies, the United States Secret Service went utterly to pieces.

Allan Pinkerton—the great detective—known as "Maj. Allen" in the Army, resigned as chief of the Secret Service because he loved and believed in Little Mac and resented his dismissal. His agents, untrained in the art of war, invariably had overestimated the numbers of the enemy. His beloved general, unable to check up on military misinformation urged and badgered by a President ignorant of all military art, moved like a man bewildered in a nightmare, while the whole land rang with his repeated demands for more and more men to help him out.

A New Leader

Now, under a new commanding general—about whom Jeb Stuart and Joe Sweeney had already made a saucy banjo song—the shattered Secret Service of the United States was being revived and reorganized. George Sharpe, colonel of the One Hundred and Twentieth New York, Infantry, had been made deputy provost marshal general. And the Bureau of Military Information was born out of chaos.

Col. Sharpe, tall, handsome, full-lipped under his curling cavalry mustache, beautifully uniformed, booted and spurred, listened courteously to everything General of Cavalry Averell had to say. Averell was even handsomer than Sharpe. It was a pleasant picture of harmonious military life, as it ought to be but seldom is.

Then came into the roomy wall tent of Col. Sharpe, Cavalry General Stoneham, who was not quite so picturesque to gaze upon. General of Cavalry John Buford followed—noble in appearance, in thought, in deed. These three controlled 12,000 free sabers. For at last the Yankee cavalry had come into its own. Jeb Stuart had shown them how it was done.

Baffled Resentment

Presently Stoneham spoke again, and harshly. "I'm deathly sick of being duped and hustled by the Rebel cavalry, Sharpe," he said. "Averell, John Buford and I believe that our troopers, saber for saber and spur for spur, are as good as Jeb Stuart's rangy grayjackets, and that the fault lies mostly with your department, which, so far, has furnished us erroneous information, or none at all."

Harmony shivered for a moment in that roomy tent. Then George Sharpe, courteous, suave: "All errors made by my department are properly my fault, of course."

"Maybe. Maybe it's your fault, maybe it's mine, maybe it's Averell's or Buford's. Or we can go higher if we like. But to what purpose? Because this kind of discussion gets us nowhere. We've got to believe in you, you've got to believe in us. That's the sine qua non . . . Well, go on from there, Colonel."

"I really do believe in you and your blue-jackets," said Sharpe, quietly, "if that's what you wish to hear."

"All right, then. Averell, Buford and I believe in you, and in your agents, couriers, spies and detectives. So now we can work it out together, can't we?"

"With pleasure," said Col. Sharpe, politely.

Ready to Help

"Very well, then," continued Stoneham; "the weather is clearing; there are plenty of signs of spring. I am going to give Gen. Averell 300 sabers and a few horse guns and send him across Kelly's Ford to smash Fitzhugh Lee at Culpeper. Can you help?"

After a silence the chief of the Secret Service nodded. "I understand you," he said. "Secrecy is to be your main element in this operation. You want me to send a counter-spy to muzzle the person who has continuously reported your movements to Jeb Stuart."

"But first of all," said Stoneman, drily, "to discover who the person is. I tell you, I'm sick of having every movement of my cavalry forestalled; of encountering always, at point of contact, a heavier force than I have sent out. It's damnable, Sharpe. I've had enough."

Col. Sharpe was extremely sympathetic. "General," he said, "our service has been in some confusion, as you know. I think everybody will find serious improvement in it from now on."

"Very well, then," growled Stoneman, "perhaps you could tell us who in hell is this Rebel Secret Service agent who continues to torment and bedevil me 24 hours every day."

"Yes," said Sharpe, "I could tell you, General."

Stoneman, Buford and Averell waited, but the chief of the Federal Secret Service said nothing further to enlighten them.

"Of course," grunted Stoneman, "you will handle this devilish matter in your own way. I am not trying to penetrate any of your secret mysteries. All I ask is that Averell, here, be permitted to cross Kelly's Ford and destroy Fitz Lee without finding the entire Confederate Army lined up, grinning, awaiting him at the water's edge."

Unperturbed

His rough irony did not seem to annoy Col. Sharpe.

"I shall do the best I can, general," he said in his always agreeable voice. "And really, I have no desire to make a mystery of the situation to you or to any officer in high command. Here is the matter in a nutshell: A very clever Confederate Secret Service agent, Capt. Jack Gailliard, succeeded in enlisting as a private in your First Rhode Island Cavalry—"

"When?" demanded Stoneman, angrily.

"After Marye's Heights. He kept Stuart informed. One of our detectives suspected that information was coming from the camp of the Rhode Islanders. But before we could identify and catch and hang the spy, he'd skedaddled."

"Wh[illegible]?" demanded Stoneman.

"Sou[illegible]bably. His usefulness here was, naturally, ended. But recently one of our agents discovered the person with whom Gailliard had been in daily touch."

"Who?" growled Stoneman. "Not a woman again, I hope."

"A woman."

"My God!" exclaimed Stoneman, disgusted, "you've just hunted Lady Greensleeves to her death and chased Belle Boyd into Richmond and locked up Nancy Hart! How many more females are spying on us?"

Dangerous Spy

"Quite a number, General. This one in particular is a young girl of excellent family, clever, resourceful and blindly devoted to the Confederacy. She is Jeb Stuart's personal spy and has a regular commission from him."

"You know who she is, sir?"

"We know now who she is, General. We know where she is. We are going to try to arrest her, if we can catch her within our lines. If not, we shall hope to render her harmless."

"Can't you destroy her?" inquired Stoneman.

"If that becomes necessary, I think we can," replied Sharpe, gravely. "I am planning to catch her and lock her up in Fort McHenry."

"Better get rid of her completely," growled Stoneman. "Is her life worth more than Averell's 3,000 youngsters? Or are your people all Quakers?"

"You don't mean that, sir," Frederi cksburg was everything most delightfully American in its social life. It is in an isolated community of this level that I have placed Operator 13, with orders to render harmless or to arrest or to destroy Miss Ford. And I have every reason to expect that my orders will be carried out."

"Then," said Averell, with his engaging smile, "I may hope to ride through Kelly's Ford without finding Lee and Jackson's line of battle in front of me?"

"We'll do our best, sir."

Impudent Singer

The three celebrated cavalry generals rose, shook hands with Col. Sharpe, pulled on their yellow gauntlets, got into their gay saddles at the tent door and galloped away with their escort of Pennsylvania horsemen to talk it all over again with Gen. Joseph Hooker, about whom Jeb Stuart and Joe Sweeney had already made a banjo song or two.

At that very moment, not far away across the river, a girl was seated at a piano, playing and singing one of those saucy banjo songs:

"Ole Joe Hooker a-settin' on his hoss,
A-lookin' lak he's los'!
Kinda 'pears lak he don't know
What to do or whar to go!

Oh, the en' of his nose
Is as ruddy as a rose,
An' he goes in a doze
Kinda dreamin' of his woes.

Oh—h!
Ole Joe Hooker,
Is yuh plum' full o' licker?
Ole Joe Hooker,
Ain't you hear that drummin'?
Ole Joe Hooker,
The Johnny Reps are comin';
Kiss yore old black bottle
goo'-bye;"

The impudent, rollicking air with its doggerel verses floated through open windows across the lawn where two other girls were playing croquet.

The great white-pillared house was Blythedale; the girl at the piano was Rosalie Blythe; the girls playing croquet were Antonia Ford and Gail Loveless—the latter known only as Operator 13 at the headquarters of the United States Secret Service. If among the dappled shadows cast by new foliage she saw also the swaying pattern of the hangman's noose, it did not seem to disturb her.

CHEVROLET

As Chevrolet looks back over the year now drawing to a close, there seems all the more reason to express, as we did last Thanksgiving Day, our thanks to the American public.

For, in 1933, the public has again awarded Chevrolet first place in motor car sales. In fact, according to the latest available figures, 45.6% of all cars and trucks purchased in the low-price field this year were Chevrolets. This not only marks the greatest margin of public preference Chevrolet has ever enjoyed, but it represents the fifth time in the past seven years that Chevrolet has occupied the prized position of leadership.

So, in keeping with the spirit of the day, Chevrolet joins with its dealers and salesmen in again voicing its appreciation to the American people. Chevrolet is deeply grateful for the confidence and goodwill which have made possible its present position in the industry, and gladly accepts the responsibilities imposed by such leadership.

Of these responsibilities, we consider none more important than that of giving the public a constantly better automobile. And we are proud to say that just such a car will be presented to the American public within a few short weeks. This new car will embody every advantage that can accrue from the large scale operations your patronage has made possible. It will return these advantages in the form of a finer automobile and a greater value to you who have given us your support. And that, after all, is the best way we know of saying, "Thank you, America!"

Tech May Press Panthers. Hard Fight in Prospect. Feature Games Elsewhere. | Inches Decide Grid Tilts. Local Players Honored. Lavish Spending by Cubs.

TARTAN DEFENSE LIKELY TO TAX PITT

On comparative form for the season, offensive power, and number and quality of replacements, Pitt shapes up as a probable winner over Carnegie Tech in the local collegiate football finale tomorrow afternoon to take the city championship for the fifth year in succession. Another item favoring the Panthers is that they were resting last Saturday, while the Skibos had to play a hard game with New York U. Many coaches agree that a two-week rest period for a major team before meeting an opponent that has been in strenuous action in the meantime is equal to two touchdowns.

Howard Harpster

Of course, it doesn't work out in that manner always. For example, Yale laid off November 18 while Harvard was playing a hard game with Brown, yet, when Yale and Harvard met on November 25, the Crimson won decisively, 19 to 6. In most instances, however, there is an advantage for the team that has been resting. Hard competition in these days of heavy schedules takes its toll in injuries and nervous energy.

But that doesn't mean that an easy victory for Pitt is a foregone conclusion. Carnegie's excellent defensive line, in which the brilliant Bunny Burzio is the standout, bids fair to make plenty of trouble for the Panthers, whose attack has produced only two touchdowns in their last two games.

GAME FINDS CARNEGIE SPIRIT AT PEAK

The Scots have matched Pitt on defense in the sense that in eight games they have been scored on by only two opponents. And it has taken long gains to register touchdowns against the Schenley Parkers. It hasn't been fashionable for foes to line up on offensive inside Tech's 35-yard line. And, besides, this is the game in which the Tartans outdo themselves, the spot in which their spirit reaches its highest point. They'd rather beat Pitt than any other opponent.

So you can't estimate what Carnegie is going to do by any previous performance. Fighting hearts and a stout defense are enough to guarantee a real fight, and on the offensive side there is a chance that the Plaid's aerial game may cause some uncomfortable moments even for a team that has not been scored on in its last four games and that has had only 13 points chalked up against it all season. The Panthers ought to win, but not without some tall fighting from Coach Howard Harpster's crew.

SEVERAL FEATURE GAMES ON OUTSIDE CARD

While many of the big football teams have closed their seasons, several feature games are on the outside card for tomorrow. The district elevens in action will be W. & J. against West Virginia University in Morgantown, and West Virginia Wesleyan against Marshall in Huntington. Penn and Cornell meet in Philadelphia to renew their ancient fixture, as will Brown and Colgate in Providence. On the Coast St. Mary's plays Oregon, and Washington State tackles U. C. L. A. In the South, the standouts will be Vanderbilt against Alabama, and Tennessee against Kentucky.

Turkey Day will not clean up the schedules, as a few big grid numbers will remain on the bills for Saturday, three of them involving the major teams that have not been defeated nor tied—Army, Princeton and Duke. The Cadets will clash with Notre Dame in New York, the Tigers go to New Haven to meet Yale, and Duke travels to Atlanta for a tilt with Georgia Tech. Southern California and Georgia will tangle in Los Angeles, and the most important of the other events will show Holy Cross against Boston College, Rutgers against Villanova, and Tulane against Louisiana. The announcement that Princeton will not be available for Rose Bowl selection increases the importance of the Army and Duke games.

By JESS CARVER

The curtain descends tomorrow on the city's 1933 intercollegiate gridiron campaign, one of the most brilliant in history, as the embattled varsities of Pitt and Carnegie Tech clash in the twentieth renewal of a pigskin series that had its inception back in 1906.

Seeking their fifth victory over the Panthers, the Tartans will take the field against the powerful Panthers in the Pitt Stadium tomorrow afternoon the underdogs once again. The Plaid seldom has entered the game with Pitt any way but on the short end, but, especially in recent years, the Panthers have not been able to make merry at the expense of the Skibos.

GREAT LINES MEET

Tomorrow's contest promises to be a battle of two great lines. Rival elevens this year have found the going extremely difficult against the two Pittsburgh elevens. Pitt's varsity has been scored on but once, by Minnesota, and only Purdue and New York University have counted on the Plaid. The Navy registered a touchdown against Pitt's third-stringers after the first and second elevens had piled up 34 points.

Minnesota beat Pitt; Purdue and New York U. accomplished like feats against Tech, and Wash-Jeff and Michigan State held the Skibos to scoreless deadlocks. Both teams beat Notre Dame, Pitt adding Nebraska, Wash-Jeff, Centre, Duquesne, West Virginia and Navy to its 1933 string of victims, while Carnegie beat back Notre Dame, Temple, Georgetown and Xavier of Cincinnati.

No fewer than 26 varsity players will parade before the stands in tomorrow's clash, 14 Panthers and a dozen Tartans.

BURZIO TECH STAR

The Skibos will present for the last time Bunny Burzio, their all-America hope; Capt. Colin Stewart, Joe Mihm, Lib Lewis, Angelo Bevevino, Heinzer, Forsman, Vorderberg, Dreshar, Sayles, Brewer and O'Toole.

Planning to beat the sturdy Tartans with superior speed and power, Coach Jock Sutherland, of Pitt, is contemplating a shift in his starting backfield, using Heinie Weisenbaugh at fullback in place of the slower but more powerful Izzy Weinstock, the lad who has been making fullback history this fall. At least, Weisenbaugh has been working with the first team this week.

The remainder of the Panther battle array will be the same as faced Nebraska 10 days ago, with O'Dell and Sebastian at the halves and Hogan at quarter; Skladany and Timmins at the ends; Walton and Meredith at the tackles; Onder and Hartwig at the guards, and Shotwell at center.

Despite the defeat at the hands of N. Y. U. last Saturday, Coach Harpster plans to stick to the

'31 INCUMBENT RESTORED BY PINCHOT

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Dr. William D. McClelland, of Pittsburgh, was appointed today as a member of the State Athletic Commission, succeeding Havey J. Boyle, Pittsburgh, whose term expired October 22.

A former member of the board, Dr. McClelland was dismissed by Gov. Pinchot in 1931. That action, the Governor said today, was "through a misunderstanding."

In renaming the Pittsburgh dentist, the Governor said:

"Dr. McClelland is exceptionally well qualified for this office. I am confident his appointment will meet with the hearty indorsement of the sports lovers of Pennsylvania."

SELECTION FORECAST

Dr. William D. McClelland, Brookline dentist, whose return to the office of boxing commissioner for Western Pennsylvania was announced today, held the position from July 3 to October 21, 1931, whereupon Havey J. Boyle, sports editor of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, whom he succeeded, was restored to the post by Gov. Pinchot.

Boyle was one of the members of the original State Athletic Commission when it took office in 1923. He has served well continuously ever since with the exception of the brief interval during which Dr. McClelland succeeded him.

The reappointment of Dr. McClelland does not come as a surprise, for it was forecast a week ago when it was revealed that a controversy was raging between Judge Ralph H. Smith, his sponsor, and County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, sponsor for Boyle, which had its denouement before the Governor in Harrisburg. It was said that Dr. McClelland meant more in a political or vote-getting way to the administration than Boyle, who has not been active in politics.

M'GOVERN SURPRISED

It is significant that both changes in the commissionership resulted from shifting political fortunes. In 1931, Dr. McClelland was appointed through the efforts of James F. Malone. Shortly afterward, Malone broke with Gov. Pinchot and, less than four months after being named, Dr. McClelland was removed in favor of Boyle at the instance of Commissioner McGovern.

McGovern, informed today of Dr. McClelland's appointment, expressed surprise, saying:

"I don't understand this. I think Boyle made a good record and was entitled to reappointment. I asked the Governor to reappoint him, and I know of no reason why he didn't."

PLAYED FOR PITT

Dr. McClelland is well versed in sports. He played baseball and football at Fifth Avenue High School from 1911 to 1914 and was captain of the baseball team in his senior year. He played football under Glenn (Pop) Warner at the University of Pittsburgh in 1915, '16 and '17 as a teammate of Dr. John Bain Sutherland, the present Pitt coach, and Tiny Thornhill, the Stanford mentor whose team will represent the West in the Rose Bowl game on New Year's Day, and also played with Sutherland at Camp Greenleaf, Ga., in 1918, the first team coached by Sutherland, and professionally with Jim Thorpe's Canton, (O.), Bulldogs in 1919. He was a quarterback.

At Pitt, Dr. McClelland also played first base on the baseball team and was the goalie of the hockey team playing in an inter-

OLD RIVALS SET FOR GRID FRAYS TOMORROW

PITT FAVORED TO WIN OVER CARNEGIE

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Thanksgiving Day has lost much of its old glory as an outstanding football date, but a score of major games tomorrow will keep the tradition alive.

Except for the intersectional clash at Lincoln between the Nebraska Cornhuskers, Big Six champions, and Oregon State, the program is marked by the renewal of a long series of Turkey Day rivalries. Notable among these will be Penn and Cornell, Brown and Colgate in the East; Virginia and North Carolina, Virginia Military and Virginia Poly in the South; Kansas and Missouri in the Midwest, and Texas and Texas A. and M. in the Southwest.

On no other day of the year, perhaps, is the football dope so liable to be scrammbled, but on the basis of results to date, the prospects for tomorrow's games line up about like this:

Nebraska-Oregon State—On the basis of their performance against Fordham 10 days ago the Beavers from the Far West look slightly the stronger.

Penn-Cornell—Penn would like to close one of its most dismal seasons with a victory over Cornell, but the Ithacans, none too successful themselves, will be favorites.

Alabama-Vanderbilt — Alabama the choice to win and gain at least a share in the Southeastern title.

Kansas-Missouri—There's nothing whatever in the records to indicate that Missouri can hold the Jayhawks in check.

Colgate-Brown—Despite the defeat by Tulane and the tie with Lafayette, Colgate's Red Raiders loom at least a touchdown better than the Bruins.

St. Mary's-Oregon—The passing attack the Gaels showed against U. C. L. A. last week, plus a sturdy running game, should give Oregon plenty of trouble.

Texas-Texas A. and M.—Comparative scores help not a bit in the quest for the winner here. If there's any advantage in a home field, the edge belongs to A. and M.

Pitt-Carnegie — The Panthers seem to pack too much power for Carnegie with such stars as Sebastian, O'Dell, Hogan, Weinstock and Weisenbaugh ready for action.

Virginia - North Carolina — The edge, and it's a thin one, apparently belongs to North Carolina.

U. C. L. A.-Washington State—Washington State seems to be a logical favorite though the score probably will be close.

backfield lineup he pulled out of his hat in Gotham for duty against Pitt. This quartet will consist of Chuch Spisak at quarter, Bill Carlson and Bowser at the halves and Joe Mihm at full.

TEREBUS THREAT

Then, of course, he'll have little but mighty Steve Terebus straining at the leash, ready to skip in there to replace either of the halfbacks.

As for the line, the terminals will be guarded by Capt. Stewart, a fine, consistent end, and Lib Lewis; the tackles by Doloway and Thurman Croft; the guards by Heinzer and Burzio, and center by Trbovich.

The rival squads will hold their final tapering-off drills today, Pitt in the Stadium and the Tartans in their own bowl.

Pitt's football family is somewhat split up today. The Panther B eleven departs for Annapolis, to meet the Navy B huskies tomorrow, and Bill Kern, assistant coach and ace scout, is in California where he'll look over Southern California's Trojans in their next two games. The Panthers meet El Trojan here next fall.

collegiate league in Duquesne Garden. He also played sandlot baseball on the J. F. Malone team, managed by Dave Roberts, and coached the E. V. Babcock independent football team.

UNCLE FAMOUS BOXER

A nephew of Jack McClelland, oldtime Pittsburgh featherweight boxer, who defeated Abe Attell, later recognized as the world champion, in a bout in St. Louis, in 1904, Dr. McClelland has been a follower of boxing from his earliest days. As a youngster he wanted to enter the ring, but his father refused permission.

The new commissioner is married and has two children. He has been practicing dentistry at 2400 Arlington avenue since 1919. He is a member of the Delta Sigma Delta and Omicron Delta Kappa fraternities.

ANNOUNCES PLANS

In a statement issued today, Dr. McClelland said:

"I am happy to be returned to the office of boxing commissioner, and shall devote my energies to serving the interests of the public and the sport to the best of my ability, as I did before. I plan to co-operate with and shall ask the co-operation of all persons connected with boxing and wrestling to the end that both they and the people who pay the way shall benefit mutually."

Boyle said he had no comment to make at this time on the change in commissioners, but might make a statement later.

Record Price Paid For Colt at Sale

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—A little bay colt, bred to be a champion, has surpassed all records of the last two years as E. J. Kenney, of Chicago, paid $6,800 for Lawrence Hanover, a son of the famous Peter Volo, at the opening of the thirty-ninth Old Glory harness horse auction in the Squadron A Armory yesterday.

Exceeding the price paid last year for Mac I. Win, then a 3-year-old, by $100, Lawrence Hanover was knocked down to the Chicago sportsman's representative only after a spirited bidding duel, in which William Cane, master of the Good Time Stable, of Goshen, N. Y., offered $6,700 for the yearling.

The auction of Lawrence Hanover, one of the 57 yearlings consigned to the Old Glory sale, was easily the high spot of the sale that saw many foreign buyers step into the arena and outbid American sportsmen.

TWO PANTHERS CHOSEN ON 'ALL-EAST'

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Army's undefeated soldiers contributed three men, the husky arrays of Fordham and Pittsburgh two each, and unbeaten Princeton, Holy Cross, Duquesne and Columbia one man apiece to the annual all-Eastern football team, picked yearly for the Associated Press by the men in the press box.

Despite a brilliant array of backfield talent, the sports writers of the East without hesitation named swift Paul Johnson, from Ashland, O., for the quarterback post, and Texas Jack Buckler, of Waco, at one halfback, giving Army two places in the backfield. Harvey Jablonsky, 190-pound running guard from Clayton, Mo., and captain, won third place.

Backs and ends ran neck and neck in the voting with Cliff Montgomery, of Columbia, winning the place beside Buckler at halfback, and Izzy Weinstock, Pittsburgh's 200-pound plunger, rounding out the backfield.

WALTON PICKED

At the ends, Joe Skladany, of Pittsburgh, and Lester Borden, of Fordham, were picked as standouts. Harvey, of Cross, and Ceppi, of Princeton, took rank among the tackles, and George Rado, of Duquesne, and Jablonsky, of Army, led all guards. Del Isola was given the first team center position.

Pittsburgh placed two men on the second eleven, with Sebastian at halfback and Waltton at tackle. The teams follow:

FIRST TEAM

Ends—Skladany, Pitt; Borden, Fordham.
Tackles—Harvey, Holy Cross; Ceppi, Princeton.
Guards—Jablonsky, Army; Rado, Duquesne.

SOCCER RIVALS SEEK DECISION

By TOM BIRKS

Having scored only one goal after three hours of hard soccer in two games against Heidelberg's well-night impregnable line, Manager Dave Mathews, of the Morgan soccer club, is planning to shift his attack for the third clash in the national challenge cup competition at Greenlee Field Sunday.

The teams have met twice in efforts to decide which shall remain the outstanding American soccer tourney, but so far have failed to produce a winner. This correspondent served notice when the draw was announced that Heidelberg and Morgan would stage one of the greatest soccer duels ever played in this district before one of them was eliminated, but no follower of the sport expected to see the teams meet three times.

TARTANS HOPE TO HOLD PITT SCORE LOW

By Howard Harpster

Carnegie Tech Football Coach, All-America Quarterback, 1928.

Tomorrow afternoon the football teams of the University of Pittsburgh and Carnegie Tech will inaugurate a new custom when they meet on Thanksgiving Day. It will be the first time these ancient rivals will play before a holiday crowd.

It has been four straight victories for the Panthers up to this year, and there appears to be no way for our team to stop the winning streak in tomorrow's game. Pitt, according to our own scouts and the football writers and experts, has one of its greatest teams. The present team is considered superior to that which swept everything aside last year, and so the Tech boys have an uneviable task before them.

Our team played a bruising and disappointing game against N. Y. U., in New York last Saturday, and will be tired both mentally and physically. The Pitt team, on the other hand, has rested since November 18, and its players will be set and in fine mental condition to close another great season successfully.

COMPARATIVE RECORDS

If our players can forget the disappointment of the N. Y. U. encounter and "come up" for tomorrow's game, I believe we will be able to hold our strong opponent to a respectable score. The records, however, indicate Pitt is from two to five touchdowns better than our team.

Pitt beat W. & J., 9 to 0, while we were completely outplayed in holding the Presidents to a scoreless tie. Both Navy and Tech beat Notre Dame by a 7-to-0 score, while the Panthers sent Navy down with a 34-to-6 defeat.

Notre Dame gained much more ground than Tech did when we beat the Irish, but the Pitt team completely outplayed the Irish in winning, 14 to 0. Minnesota and Purdue played a 7-7 tie, and then Minnesota nosed out Pitt, 7 to 3, when the latter had an off day, while Purdue beat Tech in one of our best games, 17 to 7.

END OF TOUGH TRAIL

We hold little or no hope of holding the Panthers even, but we have attempted to rally the players for this final game to give Pitt and the spectators a good battle. Our players have come through a grueling season, and, regardless of tomorrow's outcome, have more than fulfilled our expectations. If the Tech team can hold Pitt to two or three touchdowns, we will consider the tough job well done.

Arena Made Ready For Mat Program

Matchmaker Lew Raymond, of the reorganized North Side Arena, reports everything set for his first show, a wrestling program, to be held Friday night, with Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame star, making his local debut as a matman against Jim Clinstock, the Indian, who has grappled here before. They will wrestle one fall to a finish.

Five bouts make up the card. Joe Malciewicz, a rugged veteran, meets Sid Nabors in the 45-minute semi-final, and there will be three 30-minute limit preliminaries, as follows:

Bert Rubi vs. Bruno Gorrasini, Eli Fischer vs. Bill Middlekauff and Emil Dusek vs. Sam Cordovano.

The Motor Square Garden seating arrangements are being changed to elevate them and increase the capacity for lacrosse and the new setup will be ready for the Olympic A. C.'s second wrestling show, Wednesday night of next week.

TURKEY SHOOT TONIGHT

The Steel City Revolver Club will hold a turkey shoot tonight at the rifle range, 813 Liberty avenue, at 7:30 o'clock. The event is open to all revolver and small-bore rifle shooters. Twelve turkeys and 15 ducks will be awarded.

NEWSIES AT CRAFTON

The Pittsburgh Newsies football team will invade Crafton Heights tomorrow to meet the Crafton Heights eleven. The kickoff will be at 2:30.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Jimmy Belmont, the Braddock boxer, made a very serious mistake the other night . . . He came into the Moose Temple for his fight with Joey Speigal and saw two sports writers talking with his manager, Frank Klaus, and said: "Good evening, gentlemen." . . . Bill Lampe, ye picture editor of ye Sun-Telegraph, once was assistant athletic director of the University of Miami, which is playing, or will be played by, our Dukes in that post-season footh game . . . That was in the days when they used a pumpkin for a football down South . . . Jim Miller, of this department, got up to go between rounds of a fight, saying: "We can go now—this is where we came in. They weren't fighting then and they're not fighting now."

Charley Baxter, the boxer, who has been resting up in Columbus for four months, which is the same as resting up eight months anywhere else, is ready to return to the ring . . . His manager, Charley Jones, is ready to go to work at almost anything else until the fight business picks up again . . . Silly rule, that foul rule, which says a fighter committing a foul automatically loses the round regardless of what he may do otherwise in the session . . . The other night a fighter accidentally hit his opponent low at the start of a round and the latter got a rest and when he resumed was knocked down for a count of nine and badly hurt . . . If he had stayed down for one more second he would have been knocked out . . . Then what would you have done with the round?

Tug Phillips, the veteran boxer of Fayette City and Charleroi, has hung up the mittens and is opening an athletic club in the business section of Charleroi . . . A recent show in which he boxed the main bout in Ohio took in less than $30, and Tug is a smart enough businessman to know that doesn't pay . . . He also boxed on the Primo Carnera card in Youngstown and got $20 instead of the $50 promised because the show didn't draw . . . Jim Filingham, the Dukes' halfback flash, is one of his pals . . . Tug always was one of the most gentlemanly fighters in these parts, but he could be a bearcat fighter inside the ropes.

Say what else you will about it, but the Moose Temple arena is the most picturesque boxing club we've had around here since the days of Old City Hall, and later, the Power House, with its whitewashed walls . . . It is probably the only boxing arena in the land where the scribes, by choice, sit in the back row of the bleachers up on the stage instead of at the ringside sniffing the resin . . . One night when a bout wasn't so hot, the promoter came back and joined them and said: "Isn't this terrible? I think I'll holler 'fake.'" . . . And no card is complete unless Jack Dalcherone is on it, which he will be next Monday night.—HARRY KECK.

CRACK SANDLOT TEAMS MEET

At Peabody High School Field, the Peabody Alumni play the undefeated Shady Side Locklins, and the Wilkinsburg Merchants are putting on a fine attraction, booking the Scott Morgan team for a clash at Graham Field, Wilkinsburg.

Herb Creigh, former Wash-Jeff star, is coaching the Holy City gridders and is priming the boys for the Homewood invasion. Hooks Carroll, Scott Morgan star, has been driving the East Enders hard in anticipation of a tough game.

At Dean Field, Bloomfield, another local derby will be staged when the Corpus Christi gridders from Lincoln avenue meet the Bloomfield Civics.

At Etna, the Sycamores will play the Millvale Amici. This game should settle the championship of the Millvale-Etna district and will get under way at 2 p. m.

The Goose Goslins play the Williams A. C. at Carrick Park, and the Garfield Eagles meet the Liberty Scholastics in a Negro championship game at Greenlee Field.

TRADERS WIN TITLE

Washington Trade School won the junior high school soccer championship of the city yesterday when it defeated Gladstone, 1 to 0. It marked the fifth time Washington Trade School has won the title.

TIGERS' MOVE 'AFFRONT' TO STANFORD

PASADENA, Cal., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Stanford and the local tournament committee stuck their fingers in the Rose Bowl here today to find the old adage about the thorns still goes.

While the biggest thorn found in the New Year's Day football game came in the form of Princeton's announcement it would not be available for the annual classic, a local squabble cropped up in mild form to upset all concerned.

The University of Southern California officially indicated that while it had no particular designs on the game this season, it felt slighted because it had not been taken into the huddle with Oregon and Stanford when the western team was selected.

Stanford players had put Princeton on the preferred list ahead of Army and Duke, the other outstanding elevens, but Al Masters, graduate manager of the Palo Alto institution, said no invitation had been extended and that none could be sent out until after Saturday's important games.

Princeton's action probably will mean that the Rose Bowl gates will be closed to that institution forever, since the West, which takes it football so seriously, considers the statement an affront.

TIGERS WITHDRAW

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Princeton's undefeated and united football team today had been ruled out of all consideration for the Rose Bowl assignment against Stanford.

In a surprising move, the Princeton board of athletic control yesterday re-affirmed the university's policy against post-season games and announced that the Tigers, prominently mentioned as possible rivals for Stanford, would not be available for the New Year's Day classic at Pasadena.

The board pointed out that post-season games in any sport were specifically prohibited in an agreement Yale and Princeton signed in 1923 and renewed in 1927.

More Grid Players To Receive Ratings

Out of tomorrow's college football games will come an additional group of names for the all-America list of ratings from which will be selected the All-America Board of Football's annual team, which will be published exclusively in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and in connection with which a contest is being conducted, the winners of which will receive all-America football blankets.

The next ratings will be published on Saturday. The final list will follow a week later, and then the deluge of guesses will pour in, to be checked to determine the 10 winners.

Prospective contestants are requested to withhold their selections until the last and complete rating list is published.

CLASS B SCHOOL TEAMS SET FOR TITLE CLASH

E. PITTSBURGH OUT TO TAKE FIRST TITLE

By JULIUS LEVIN

After knocking at the door for several years, East Pittsburgh High School's football team, coached by Johnny Coleman, will be given its first opportunity to win a W. P. I. A. L. grid crown Saturday afternoon when Mt. Pleasant is met at Greensburg in a post-season game for the class B laurels.

East Pittsburgh High School has compiled a fine record in sports since Johnny Coleman took over the coaching reins. Its basketball team has won its sectional crown for the last two years. The football teams of the last three seasons likewise have compiled fine records, one setback keeping the Terracemen out of the running for the title three years ago.

In clashing with Mt. Pleasant Saturday, Coleman's eleven is facing one of the best class B teams ever to represent a district high school. Ned Culler's machine has swept aside all opposition with the exception of Greensburg and Canonsburg, two schools operating under higher classification. Greensburg was held to a 6-6 draw while Canonsburg was an 8-0 winner.

School Notes

North Braddock schools have carried off two football championships in the W. P. I. A. L. Scott High, coached by Johnny Reed, ruled supreme among the class A schools, while the junior high school shared that title with Clairton.

Speaking of North Braddock, Scott High School, according to reports, will have to scout around for several new opponents for its 1934 football slate. Homestead and Duquesne, both staunch rivals of the Reedmen, have dropped Scott, leaving two big gaps on the program.

Ben Lubic, former basketball star at Duquesne University, is coaching at Braddock Junior High School. His school was admitted to the Junior W. P. I. A. L. along with Bentleyville and Brownsville.

The South Hills High School football squad, winner of the Section II championship of the City League, will be honored at a banquet to be held in the school dining room on Thursday, December 7. A dance will follow the banquet.

Two of the most active workers in the Junior W. P. I. A. L. are Fred Haines, principal at Duquesne Junior High and B. H. Byers, principal at Elizabeth High School.

Someone is enjoying a turkey dinner at the expense of the Junior W. P. I. A. L. One of the three stuffed fowls, all ready for roasting, was pilfered from the Glassport High School the afternoon of the annual Junior W. P. I. A. L. banquet and it was necessary for M. J. Blaser, principal at Glassport, to send a hurry call to the market for another. The meal prepared by the R. O. H. (Royal Order of Housekeepers) at Glassport High, under the supervision of Miss Buttermore, however, left no room for complaint.

Mt. Pleasant High School, which meets East Pittsburgh for the class B title at Greensburg Saturday, will honor its football team at a banquet in the high school gymnasium next Tuesday evening. A. A. (Buzz) Wesbecher, coach at Greensburg High School, will be the principal speaker. He should have plenty to talk about inasmuch as Mt. Pleasant held his strong eleven to a 6-6 tie. Ned Culler, Mt. Pleasant coach, and A. M. McCloy and L. H. Shaw are the banquet committee.

CANNELL, TATE QUIT POSTS

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Jackson Canneil resigned yesterday as head coach of the Dartmouth varsity football team.

Cannell, however, has a contract that does not expire until after the 1934 season and it can be terminated only by the Dartmouth athletic council, which does not meet until December 17. He served as head coach during the past five seasons as well as in 1921 and 1922.

Then tendering of the resignation was regarded here as the direct result of a first-page editorial in yesterday's issue of "The Dartmouth," student daily, which claimed that "Dartmouth could not play confident football again next year under Cannell with a morale that has been weakened by the anvil chorus of criticism.

TATE RESIGNS

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Lehigh University is to have a new football coach next year and Glen Harmeson, backfield coach at Purdue, is one of the tentative candidates mentioned for the post.

Austin A. Tate, who has coached Lehigh's elevens for the last seven years, resigned yesterday, effective with the expiration of his contract on February 1, 1934.

difference between victory and defeat. That is why smart mentors always coach their players to gain every possible inch, as well as yards. Clark Shaughnessy, of the University of Chicago, is one major coach who can attest this season the value of inches on the gridiron. With a little more than one foot of additional gain, his team, instead of failing to win one of its five Western Conference games, might have won two and tied another.

Clark Shaughnessy

Some figure filbert in Chicago comes up with statistics showing that in their five Conference engagements the Maroon gridders gained a total of 943 yards and yet made only one touchdown. That beats Notre Dame's record for a single trip across the goal line, but it's only part of the story. The statistician goes on to compute that if Chicago had made only FOURTEEN INCHES more in the right spots, the extra distance would have sufficed to win two games that were tied and to tie one other contest that was lost.

ALL-EAST AWARDS GRID TRIBUTE TO CITY

The naming of Pittsburgh players for three of the eleven positions on the all-East team selected by the press box poll of the Associated Press is a high tribute to the quality of this city's football. Individually, the awards bring no little distinction to Joe Skladany, end, and Izzy Weinstock, fullback, both of Pitt, and to George Rado, Duquesne University guard. In each case it is a just recognition of consistently brilliant work through a hard schedule. And it is quite something extra for Weinstock and Rado to be honored in their junior season.

There is all the greater distinction for Rado and Duquesne in the fact that this is the first time a Duquesne player ever has been given a place on a major "all" team. Like Skladany and Weinstock, the Brookfield star had to be extraordinarily good to win out over a wide field that included an unusual number of fine players this season. The honors bestowed on Rado show that the spread of Duquesne's football fame did not stop at the selection of Elmer Layden's great team for a charity game in St. Louis on Sunday, December 10, against the winner of tomorrow's St. Louis-Washington contest, and for the Festival of Palms event with Miami University in Miami on New Year's Day.

CUBS SPEND HALF MILLION FOR STARS

With P. K. Wrigley following the policy of his late father in keeping the pursestrings untied for the acquisition of high-class baseball material to maintain the ranking of the Cubs as annual pennant contenders, it is estimated that the Chicago club has spent $500,000 within a few years for star players. The deal for Rogers Hornsby in 1929 topped the list, $200,000 and five players being given to the Braves in exchange for the Rajah.

P. K. Wrigley

Woody English, Billy Herman and Stanley Hack cost an average of $30,000 each when purchased from minor league clubs. In addition to the players turned over, $75,000 went to the Reds for Babe Herman. The amount of cash accompanying three Cubs to the Phils last week in the deal for Chuck Klein wasn't less than $65,000 and may have been closer to $100,000. The lesser lights purchased from the minors easily run the investment to the half-million mark.

THURSDAY

Children and grown-ups alike will share in the Thanksgiving Day fare which the three networks will offer on Thursday. Several programs specially designed for "Turkey Day" will be heard, and the occasion will be marked by holiday emphasis of the regular radio features.

Among the special programs will be the Thanksgiving ceremonies broadcast from historic Plymouth Rock, where the Pilgrims landed. The feature is heard over NBC-WCAE at 5 o'clock Thursday.

Football

The annual Brown-Colgate football game will come to NBC-KDKA listeners at 1:45 p. m. tomorrow.

Thanksgiving evening, at 8:30 William Lyon Phelps, conducting the "Voice of America" program over CBS-WJAS, will introduce Mrs. Leonard Wood, widow of the famous General.

She will extend a Red Cross Thanksgiving greeting.

Explorer

Dr. R. L. Belknap, director of a recent air expedition to Greenland, will be the guest of Cap'n Henry during the Show Boat program, heard over NBC-WCAE Thursday night at 9.

Crystal Gazer Tells Radio Secrets

My faithful aid, ster[illegible] secretary who, at odd intervals, becomes [illegible]ssory to this space, reported for duty somewhat tardily this morning, in proud possession of an occult crystal plus a book of instructions.

She began almost at once to gaze into its translucent depths, all the while without the slightest intention of subscribing to the weird powers attributed to the tantalizing toy.

I found, nevertheless, that her visions and observations held mild fascination.

Globe Trotter's Broadcasts

Louis L. Kaufman, Globe Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, broadcasts the day's news over WCAE-WJAS today at 12:15, 2:15 and 6:30 p. m.

On Thanksgiving Day, the Globe Trotter takes a holiday.

Squabbles

Seeking an answer to the question, "Why was that new cigaret show, with the Casa Loma Orchestra, postponed last night?" in the crystal my titian sorceress saw studio squabbles during a rehearsal, wherein an over-supply of talent reached nearly free-for-all proportions.

The vistas supernaturally induced are provokingly hazy about dates, but Miss Mac is certain that it will be on December 8, sometime in the afternoon, that the very first broadcast from the patent office will materialize via CBS, and put into action the weird assortment of automatic musical instruments that exist in Uncle Sam's novelty shop.

New Moon

And while hovering about the capital, where Kate Smith was materialized in a theater, it became apparent to sorceress MacGillicuddy that Miss Smith is surely to have a commercial by January, and it'll be either a medical product or an auto which she ballyhoos.

Proceeding without benefit of occultism, it is safe, I think, to predict that Jack Pearl, who has until December 23 to continue with his sponsor, will be offered a continuation of his role as the baron, but will refuse, not out of vindictiveness toward his patron, nor because of ill-feeling on the other side of the fence, but to consider an 18-month association with a bankroller, new to the air, who plans a year and a half sequence of the baron as a philosopher, instead of a gag man.

This sponsor has never been on the air, and is standing by until the baron is available.

Mystery

The first job assigned to KDKA's new "Black Panther Detectives" (Honeyboy and Sassafras), was to solve the Big Bell Mystery — who hung it in the belfry Sunday night during the Xmas Seal broadcast?

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

A happy Thanksgiving to you all. Even though to some of us it is obscure, there is something for each and every one of us to be thankful for. Some of us are lucky. We know why we are thankful and I happen to be among the latter class. If I were asked to say what makes me thankful I would reply YOU. You have been kind, and patient, many times, too.

I am thankful.

COSMETICS
Pink Cheeks . . . . . Red Lips!

It's found all over everywhere on Christmas Day . . . what is it? The answer is "mistletoe" . . . but it might have been "cosmetics"! For they play fully as important a part as that other bringer of blushes!

Besides . . . this being the day and age of beauty in everything . . . cosmetics have come to be one of the smartest, best-looking gifts that can be given! Quaint, chic or unusual little boxes of this or that colored paste, the better to gild the lily! And each of them . . . or a set of them . . . capable of bringing a sparkle to most feminine eyes.

Keeping an eye on the advertisements of this kind which appear in this newspaper will be amply rewarded in wise suggestions between now and Christmas.

STOCKS SHOW PRE-HOLIDAY APATHY

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Stocks limped through a typical pre-holiday routine today, with most of the sleepy-toned leaders ignoring market influences.

The domestic gold rate was boosted 3 cents an ounce to $33.93 and sterling jumped about 6 cents. French francs also firmed several points. In the early afternoon, however, both these currencies had yielded most of their gains. Metal equities firmed in response to the gold advance, and a number of others improved moderately, but there was no buoyancy in any category. The ticker tape was silent for minutes at a time. Wheat got up a cent a bushel and cotton again improved. Silver was in demand. United States government securities and prime investment bonds sagged.

On an unusually small turnover, shares of United States Smelting showed a gain of 2 points and McIntyre, Dome, American Smelting and Cerro de Pasco were up about 1 each. Other gainers of around a point included Allied Chemical, Du Pont, United States Steel, American Can, Case, Sears, Roebuck, Chrysler, Columbian Carbon, Goodyear, New York Central, Santa Fe and Pennsylvania. American Telephone was about unchanged.

Wall street eyes were directed toward Warm Springs where Eugene R. Black, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, was conferring with the President. It was taken for granted that the monetary situation would form the principal subject of discussion, although there was little expectation that any important decisions would be announced immediately.

AUTO INDUSTRY SETS RECORD

DETROIT, Nov. 29.—November sales of new passenger automobiles in the United States will approximate 108,000 units, exceeding sales in the same month for the last three years, and bettering the 93,066 total in 1930 by 16 per cent, R. L. Polk announces in its national motor car sales report.

The announcement, which is based on sales in 107 principal cities, means that the rising new passenger automobile sales curve, which dipped to a low for the depression period in February, has now passed the curves for 1932, 1931 and 1930.

The November sales will be 42 per cent greater than the 75,829 sales total in 1931 and 145 per cent more than the 44,358 sales total in 1932.

New passenger automobile sales in October totaled 136,426, bringing the total for the first 10 months of the year to 1,340,990, comparing with 1,096,399 for all of 1932.

GRAINS MAKE BRISK JUMP

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Brisk jumps in grain values took place early today following a new hoist of the Washington quotation on gold. Action of the Argentine government in appointing a grain regulation board empowered to buy wheat at fixed prices was also construed as bullish. Opening $1\frac{1}{8}$ to $1\frac{3}{4}$ higher, wheat afterward rose further. Corn started $\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 cent up, and subsequently held near the initial limits.

After a bulge of 2 cents in wheat, the market receded a cent, and then fluctuated in nervous fashion. Corn and oats markets today chiefly tagged after wheat. Provisions were responsive to upturns of cereals.

MORGENTHAU'S APPOINTMENT CHALLENGE

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—In this topsy turvy world, the elevation of Henry Morgenthau, Jr., to the acting secretaryship of the Treasury brings to the post, until comparatively recently occupied by Andrew W. Mellon, an apple grower and a dairy farmer from Dutchess county, New York.

Mr. Rukeyser

Back in the Wilson administration, there was a partial precedent for the appointment when David F. Houston, then secretary of agriculture, was transferred to the secretaryship of the Treasury. Observers see in the appointment of Mr. Morgenthau another indication of the important recognition which the position of the farmer is receiving.

Unquestionably, the appointment was a challenge to the Wall street influence in the Treasury. Not consulted in advance, important bankers have been critical. The appointment marks a definite step under the "new deal" in challenging the authority of the intrenched money power.

MONETARY POLICY

There has been throughout the country much futile mental speculation as to whether the Morgenthau appointment means a definite swing toward inflation. As a matter of fact, the Morgenthau monetary policy is precisely that which President Roosevelt outlined in his last radio address, in which he stressed the effort to revalue the dollar in terms of domestic purchasing power.

Mr. Morgenthau pleads guilty to the indictment that he is not a professional financier or economist. He was chosen, however, because the President had complete confidence in his integrity and had tested his capacity as an administrative officer as Conservation Commissioner of the state of New York and more recently as head of the Farm Credit Administration.

Here at Washington, Mr. Morgenthau did the finest work of the present administration toward consolidating overlapping bureaus, bringing seven credit agencies under one central grouping. As Acting Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Morgenthau has set out to raise the administrative efficiency of the Treasury so as better to carry out the President's monetary policy.

EXPERT ADVISORS

Mr. Morgenthau's friends declare it is unproductive to speculate about Mr. Morgenthau's monetary theories. His soundness and warrant to business confidence, they assert, are shown by the character of men, with specialized knowledge, he has brought to the Treasury to supplement his own blind spots.

They had in mind Earle Bailie, Wall street financier, who has come here to take charge of government financing operations. Tom K. Smith, St. Louis banker who has been brought here to advise Mr. Morgenthau on all matters pertaining to Treasury contacts with banks, and Roswell Magill, of Columbia University, who has come as Treasury expert on income tax affairs.

It can definitely be said that Mr. Morgenthau is not relying exclusively on Prof. Warren's advice, and the acting secretary is committed to no economic dogmas, such as the commodity dollar.

The Girl Who Won

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XLIV.

"Mr. Brilling left the house a half hour ago, madam," said the butler.

"So? Did he go off in the car? Or how?" inquired the bride angrily.

"He went on horseback, madam. He said he might or might not be in for luncheon."

"When the servant had withdrawn Madeleine turned to her guests, with a baffled gesture. "Now where do you think he has gone? Isn't it just too bad of Jack to be so?"

Ted White puffed at his cigaret and said, sententiously: "Cherchez la femme."

"That means 'find the woman,' doesn't it? But there aren't any [illegible] the neighborhood," [illegible]e quickly.

Ted White, who was an inveterate gossip, looked from one to the other.

"What murky secret is afoot? In other words, what lady?"

"Oh, just an old flame of Jack's who has bobbed up again," cried Rhoda recklessly.

"On his HONEYMOON? But how intriguing!" Ted White flicked the cigarette ash off with his little finger.

The bride was furious.

"You ought to be a writer, Rhoda, with your wild imagination," she said acidly.

WHITE INQUISITIVE

Responded Rhoda, in no whit abashed: "Well, it's quite in order apropos of our previous conversation."

"And what was that?" inquired Ted White, who liked to be in on every scandal.

"Oh, just a little stenographer who made a big play for Jack in the office and got fired for her pains."

"Where is she now? Up here? How very enterprising of the young person."

And Mr. White sipped his second cocktail and took another puff at his cigaret.

"It's all quite trivial, but with your world-wide experience of the eternal Eve, and your captivating ways, maybe you can get at the root of the matter," volunteered Rhoda with a giggle. The drinks were potent, and had gone to her head a little.

"Certainly. But how? You know any amorous adventure is a surefire bait for me," said Mr. White, grinning.

"You look rather like Mephistopheles at this moment, Ted," observed Madeleine.

"Then find me Marguerite," he said aptly, "and I'll get the good work in."

"You're devilish, I'll say," said Rhoda, "but they do tell me you have an extraordinary success with the wimmins!"

"Thank you, fair lady." He bowed unctuously.

BRIDE JEALOUS

Rhoda took another drink. The bride did ditto.

"Now about this old flame of Jack's?" said Ted. "I take it he's with her just now?"

"I should say not!" cried the bride, "or, believe me, there'll be an immediate divorce in this family!"

"Then, what's all the conference about? Why the dark hints from Rhoda?"

"Because I think Rhoda has a fancy for Jack herself," said Madeleine sarcastically. Cocktails had a way of making her suspicious and annoyed with the whole world.

"Bunk! I spoke only in your own interest. If he wants to take up with this former stenographer of his he can, for all I care," snapped Rhoda.

"Stenographer?" repeated Ted [illegible]te.

[illegible]he bride was annoyed and jealous. That was obvious enough.

"Look here," said Ted, "why shouldn't I play Don Juan, if the siren's floating about in this neighborhood?"

"She isn't floating about," corrected Rhoda, "she's closeted with Mr. Judson at this moment, compiling a novel."

"A WHAT? Does Jinny Judson write? Is a female Saul among the prophets?"

"Oh, drop metaphors, Ted, and be yourself, for once. Let the old brain pan do a little working."

"Well, spill the beans. I'm all at sea. What IS the situation?"

"You can tell him about the episode, for all I care," said Madeleine.

So Rhoda recited the story of Nollie's exit from the office embellishing it considerably.

Indeed, no one who knew Nollie would have recognized the tale, when Rhoda had finished it.

"So she even wanted to blackmail him," explained Ted White.

"But Jack quickly put the kybosh on her," supplemented Madeleine, the bride.

The drinks had gone to their heads. They chatted like conspirators.

"I'll str[illegible]g her along," suggested Ted White.

"And then Mrs. Judson will fire her," said Rhoda.

GO AFTER JACK

"But why are YOU so concerned in this young person's doings?" suddenly Ted turned on her.

Rhoda looked caught. She stammered: "Because — I'm a friend of Madeleine's."

They lunched together in the Galbraith lodge, Madeleine, Ted White and Rhoda.

The bridegroom did not appear. As the trio were all a little drunk, they made free speculations over him.

WHERE was Jack? With WHOM? Who was the WOMAN?

"I'll say you two have suspicious minds, exclaimed Madeleine.

"Let's go down to Tony O'Brien's shack and see if Jack is there?" suggested Rhoda, when they had had their coffee.

They all piled into Rhoda's car.

She took the wheel. They were soon within walking distance of the shack, for she drove rapidly.

They went on foot through the undergrowth. They came out at the side of the little hut that was close to the lake.

Nollie Day and Tony were fishing absorbedly in a canoe not far from shore, and when Rhoda called them, Tony paddled the canoe inward.

Soon the small craft had gained the bank where the trio stood.

Nollie was hatless. The sun glinted on her pretty brown hair, bringing out the auburn lights in it.

And Ted White suddenly touched Rhoda's arm. He whispered: "God! I've seen this girl before! In the apartment of a Broadway cocotte of the most brazen type—and you can take it from me this girl's a regular little devil!"

Synopsis

Nollie Day, stenographer at an exclusive hotel, is befriended by wealthy Mrs. Judson, a widow. Nollie goes to a theater in place of Mrs. Judson, where she meets handsome Tony O'Brien. She reveals her own identity but Tony does not hear her. Next day, Tony telephones and learns Mrs. Judson has gone abroad. Nollie wants to clear her identity, but is unable to get in touch with Tony. Mrs. Judson returns and ask Nollie to become her secretary and visit her ranch. Nollie accompanies Mrs. Judson to a garden party and meets Rhoda Vane. Rhoda seems to dislike Nollie. Nollie and the widow leave for the ranch after inviting Rhoda. Nollie is surprised when she meets Tony near the ranch. Tony is pleased when she tells him she is not Mrs. Judson. Rhoda visits the ranch. She is rude to Nollie, but plainly tries to gain Tony's favor. Tony confesses that he loves Nollie. Jack Brilling and his bride are on a honeymoon near the Judson place. Rhoda and Jack see Nollie and Tony together at Mrs. Judson's place.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Thin girls who live on nothing a day lest a fat cell may descend upon them may keep reedy, but they aren't being kind to complexion, hair or teeth which are dependent upon good chow for health and well-being. Undernourished individuals are easy prey to germs and infections; the tubercle baccilus is looking for just such material to work upon. Deficient diet has a bad effect upon the spirits and the nervous system. Many a slim-jim darling is snappy and snarly because she is hungry. Being slender may be heavenly, but being scrawny is something else again. And Popper Time picks out the thin ones for his line etchings. So down the groceries, like a good girl.

Lips should look moist, be free of cutaneous shags. The lipstick doesn't always make for the smooth surface. Use glycerine. It's healing and softening, provides a glisten when applied before the rose-red cosmetic gets in its edifying work. Biting the lips is a distressing habit. No sense in it. The practice of continually moistening the lips is something to be deplored. Makes them dry and sensitive.

SHAY REBELLION—"CRITICAL PERIOD" OF UNITED STATES

The government of the young United States based upon the Articles of Confederation was bound to be unsuccessful since it lacked the power and machinery to exact and collect contributions from the states. It had no central executive power, no national courts of justice, no national money, no control of interstate commerce, etc. This led to discontent, disorganization, trade wars, bloody border conflicts (Wyoming Valley Massacre, Pa.) and armed revolts. One of these was the Shay rebellion (in Massachusetts) led by Capt. Shay (1786-1787); it demanded reduction of taxes, increase of paper money, etc., and finally was dispersed by the military. The period 1783-1789—terminated by the passage of the Constitution—is called "Critical Period" in the history of the U. S.

THE PLUNGE OF THE "AERODROME"

Prof. Samuel P. Langley, an American, who had made successful steam-driven models of flying machines since 1896, built a petrol (52 h. p.) engine-driven tandem plane, called "Aerodrome," subsidized by the U. S. government. It plunged into the Potomac River at its first trial and also at its second (1903) and was badly damaged. The inventor, ridiculed and deprived of financial backing, could not continue the experiments and died three years later.

In 1914 Glenn Curtis installed a modern airplane motor in the repaired Aerodrome and flew it! Langley was vindicated as a great pioneer of aviation. (Transportation)

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING (1621)

The settlers of the New World brought by the Mayflower in 1620 endured great hardships and suffering, until they were sheltered in their newly-erected homes and could reap the harvest of their toil, the first crop. They accepted it as a blessing of God and set aside a certain day to express their gratefulness in prayers, rejoicing in feasting and exercising charity. This was called Thanksgiving Day.

Since then this has become a custom made nation-wide by annual presidential proclamation designating, as a rule, the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day. (Character Building

BOHR'S DYNAMIC ATOM

Niels Bohr, Danish physicist, developed the electronic theory of atter (1913). He pictured the atom as a miniature solar system, here the sun is the nucleus containing all the protons (+electric particles) and about half of the electrons (−electric particles), while the planets are the remaining (satellite) electrons revolving around the nucleus in different shells. Atoms of different elements contain different numbers of protons and electrons. Simplest is the hydrogen (1 proton, 1 electron); most complicated is the uranium (with 92 satellite electrons).

STUDY AND PASTIME UNDER CAESARS

The education of the common people was only sporadic in the Roman empire. Rich youth had tutors, mostly Greek teachers, hired or captives from conquests (above). Augustus Octavianus established at Rome a university famous mainly for law. Two other great culture centers were Athens for art and Alexandria for medicine. Barbarians, conquered by Romans, profited greatly by their culture. Top: Milady goes for a drive in ancient Rome. (World History-Roman Customs)

Dipsomania Pro Patria

The dry dreads the fermented ides of December. So does the wet.

It all goes back to the oldtimer on the morning after. He wakes up with his head feeling like 15 pounds of nervous gun cotton. His eyes look like dots that have lost their alphabet. His mouth tastes like somebody had traded it for a moose's left ear.

It sounds good. The clinking stops.

"Shake that ice," he yells.

"This ain't ice," a voice mikes, "it's a scuttle of coal."

"Well, shake it anyway," the oldtimer hollers, "it sounds like ice."

And that is the kind of a December morning the wet dreads. What has the dry to fear? He has never been scourged by the whiplash of remorse, hammered by the midget devils of Katzenjammer or chopped fine by the multitudinous sabres of reaction.

A dry is a man who can take it or postpone it. A wet is a man who takes it where he finds it. And is found where he took it.

Will power doesn't enter into the thing. The wet is a victim of a chemical formula. His system cries for a missing ingredient. And what man is going to stand there and let a poor old system cry?

Your perpetual dry is to be envied and congratulated. Nature has supplied him with all the essential oils. He is complete. But your wet requires fuel to round off the corners and smooth away the wrinkles. He goes full steam ahead from one filling station to another, knowing what he is doing and dreading the results. He is not his own master and knows it.

So, instead of scolding the wet, we should sympathize with him. He seeks a hopeless balm in the chimerical bottle. His is the quest, the torment and the jeebies. The government has set its mark at close to seven hundred millions revenue and the wet must do his share.

He must not only drink for himself, but also for the dry who doesn't. From now on, he is doing two men's work. And it's tough to be twins the morning after.

Oxcart Government

Officials and Administrative Units Needed a Century Ago Are Superfluous Now.

-ties, townships, school districts and other adminis-nits in the government of Pennsylvania were to a lar- -tent created before there were railroads, or telephones, or paved roads, or automobiles.

We can scarcely realize in this swift age how slow travel and communication were in those days. Journeys were made in stage coaches or on horseback, and letters were transmitted in the same way. The instantaneous transmission of messages over long distances by telegraph and the other modern means of quick communication were, of course, unknown.

In these circumstances communities were more or less isolated and had to supply their own agencies of government. Counties were formed out of areas with only a few thousand population, and they in turn were divided into townships with administrative officers. An immense army of officeholders was thus created.

The support of this army of public officials may not have been burdensome in those days. Salaries and fees probably were not as large as they are now. And even if the maintenance was burdensome, there was no help for it. Every little community had to have its school board and its justice of the peace and its supervisors of one sort or another, because it took too long to communicate with or go to some other community for the transaction of public business.

Similarly, numerous areas had to have their own sheriffs and county commissioners and coroners and other county officers because the people could not afford to take more than a day to travel to the Courthouse, and more than a day was necessary if the county seat was a greater distance from their homes than, let us say, 25 miles.

There is no longer need of all these administrative units, no longer need of all these officeholders. Swiftness of travel and communication permit eliminations and consolidations. And the sooner these eliminations and consolidations are effected, the better it will be for the taxpayers; for the support of this army of public officials has become an intolerable burden.

Why should not Forest and Cameron Counties, with population less than that of Avalon; and Fulton County, with population less than that of Bellevue; and Pike County, with population less than that of Etna, unite with adjoining counties, and save the expense of maintaining an independent set of county officials? The people will be able to visit the county seats of the adjoining counties in far less time than it took to visit their own county seats when their counties were created.

Why should 104 school districts, each with its tax collector and solicitor and auditor, continue to be maintained in Allegheny County, when the business of all of them could be satisfactorily transacted by one central authority?

Why should every township have two justices of the peace when, in many cases, it takes less time to come to Pittsburgh from the township by automobile than it took to visit the squire's office in the oxcart days?

Why should Allegheny County and the City of Pittsburgh both maintain real estate assessment boards that to a large extent duplicate each other's work?

The people voted a few weeks ago to modify the old Blue Law. Why not do away with some of the other governmental burdens that have come down to us from 1794?

Edward O. Tabor declared yesterday that at least 5,000 tax-collecting agencies in Pennsylvania, including the delinquent tax collector, are unnecessary and should be abolished. He urged this in connection with a plea for the maintenance of our present school system, which is threatened by taxpayers' protests against the burdens they are required to bear.

The elimination of these superfluous officials would save the people a vast amount of money, and there are many others besides tax collectors who can be dispensed with.

Naturally, however, this army of "tax eaters" who have been devouring the people's substance during all these years will not give up their offices without a struggle.

Modernization of the government will be vigorously opposed.

But there is encouragement for those who are championing this cause in the many accessions that are coming to the movement from thoughtful individuals and wide-awake civic organizations everywhere.

Realization is coming not only in Allegheny County and Pennsylvania, but throughout the nation, that this is the twentieth century—the era of the airplane and motor car—and it is time to scrap oxcart government.

Gold in Them Thar Stamps

In Some of Them, Anyway.

At an auction in New York, four United States air mail stamps issued in 1918 at 24 cents each were sold for $12.100.

The four stamps were bought originally from the Washington (D. C.) postoffice as part of a sheet of 100, for which $24 was paid.

This was probably the biggest bargain that anybody who bought a stamp at a postoffice window ever got, for the purchaser discovered that the airplane on the stamps was upside down.

Why not, every few years, turn a design upside down deliberately, on a few stamps, and then sell the results to collectors?

This looks like one of the few fields in which the government could make money without raising taxes, and it is so simple that you are surprised nobody ever thought of it before.

Forecasting the Weather

Twenty-three Years Ahead.

Long-range weather forecasting, which has been the goal of almanac makers, meteorologists and plain "weather prophets" for centuries, may at last be a practical possibility.

Dr. Charles G. Abbott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, announces to a meeting of the National Academy of Sciences at Cambridge, Mass., that weather repeats itself every 23 years.

Should further experience bear out this claim the importance of such long-distance forecasting can hardly be overestimated.

Agriculture, industry and transportation would all benefit profoundly.

It Would Puzzle Isaac Newton

By Nelson Harding

If wise Sir Isaac Newton could
Come back to earth today
And see these strange phenomena,
Would he view with dismay

The vagaries of gravity,
Of falling up and down?
We fear the great man's brow would wear
At least a puzzled frown!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

—By O. O. McIntyre—

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—It's grand news for lovers of the American essay that Robert Cortes Holliday has picked up his pen again after eight sabbatical years. He had what he told friends was "a lot of awful health." But by isolation and rest in a Jersey cloister is back in old-time form.

One of his observations of life is that the best books have been written by a lot of busted-down old sports. And his literary credo is Whistler's: "The artist's career always begins tomorrow." Also he likes George Moore's dictum: "Anybody can have talent at 20; the thing is to have it at 50."

Holliday is 54 and his newest work is, under a colorful surface, a serious tracing of civilization. Critics bespeak it highly. The essayist is out of Indiana's famed literary belt. He has written some 20 books, among them being the finest extant on walking as a fine art.

Christopher Morely praised him in a critique as "the American Belloc." Once a gay figure along the boulevards, here and abroad, he learned to live without cities, taking to the countryside and dogs. About him when he writes are three wires and three cockers.

Diggers, professional ticket buyers employed by scalpers, comprise a strange strain in the broadway spawnings. In opulent times they could make from $100 to $150 a week. Today they are lucky to make $25. A scorned calling which subjects them to rousing epithets and often a toss in the gutter, they will not give up.

A walk-up lodging house on the Bowery swanks a bit of side with this over-the-entrance slogan: "Perfect appointments for resident or transient guests."

Hotels and restaurants in the theatrical district are removing block sugar off their tables and substituting granulated. Kindness-to-animals chorus girls swipe the domino cubes to feed mounted patrolmen's horses.

I've often wondered how, in a sudden rain, policemen appear so quickly in rubber coat, boots and water-shedding hats just like so many toadstools. The paraphernalia is kept in neighboring hat-check rooms and garages. Theater alleys, especially those beside the Globe and Shuberts, are where mounted cops check their steeds.

* * *

The blind cul de sac known as Washington Mews-wasn't it Harry Kemp who chalked under the signpost name "So does a cat?"—is one of the few artistic areas untouched by depression. Once a stable alley for aristocrats of the square, the low brick quarters were remodeled into studio apartments with all the shine of scrubbed white steps and brass knockers. Every one is occupied.

Not even Jimmy Walker so kindled the popular fervor immediately after election as did Fiorello H. La Guardia. His appearance at a theatre a few days after victory tied traffic in a knot and nearby shops were completely deserted. La Guardia is no shrinking violet, and seems to like the grandstand play. His smile is a beam and handshake a crusher. Like him or not, he has the engaging vitality that magnetizes the masses. Back of all the hoopla, however, is the joy of a long-suffering citizenry over Tammany's defeat. The Tiger may stalk again, but the limp will be noticeable for many moons.

Daniel Frohman continues at 80 to be the most active figure on the Rialto. He never misses a luncheon or dinner connected with the stage's activities. A victim of insomnia, his only difficulty is garnering enough winks to sustain him for an extremely busy life. A frequent first night companion is Fannie Hurst, their friendship dating to those slate-gray days when Miss Hurst was bearding the editorial lions.

'REDDING UP' FAULTS

—By Winifred Black—

The other day I thought I would "redd up" the bureau drawers and the closets. What, you don't know what it is to "redd up"? Well, you never had a grandmother out of Devonshire, did you?

Anyhow I "redded up" for two or three hours and had a lovely time finding this and looking for that.

Stockings in particular—such a lot of them, there seemed to be.

It was quite exciting about the stockings. Yes, most of the unexpected ones had something wrong with them, a little tear here, or a run there, or rather a hateful hole in the heel or toe, but they were so good every other way that I just couldn't bear to throw them away, so I folded them up neatly and put them in the right places, and the next day when I wanted to dress, it took me quite a while to find a really good pair of stockings.

I'm always doing things like that, aren't you?

There are the old hats on the shelf in the downstairs closet, a little faded, this one, a bit out of shape that one, hopelessly out of fashion the other one—but will I give them to somebody who might know enough to make them over into something wearable, will I even take the trouble to call up the Salvation Army and give those old hats away, will I even throw them into the trash barrel and let it go at that?

I will not—the blue one—that's the one I wore to the picnic when we all had such a good time.

The black one I always liked to wear that, plain enough to be sure, but somehow—

The greenish straw, now well I liked it when I saw it in the window at the little milliners. W- I bought it for a song, I sh- probably never wear it again, but I sort of hate to—don't you know?

Why I act just like that about faults, too, my own faults, silly, little meaningless traits, small, petty prejudices, they don't do me or anyone else in the world a bit of good.

Why do I let them cumber my life and get in other people's way?

Why don't I "redd up" once in a while and throw away the foolish habits and the silly whims, and the hateful mean little spites and get rid of them once and for all?

And then there are the people that I keep seeing, people I don't like, people who don't like me either.

We have no use for each other really.

They think I"m a bore and I think they're a nuisance, why don't I just keep away from them quietly and let them keep away from me?

We simply irritate and annoy each other, and while one of them is talking to me over the telephone she might be talking with someone she really likes, and really understands. Why do I clutter up my life with people who are undoubtedly fine, useful, well meaning and well doing people—but not the kind that I enjoy, and doubtless they are thinking the same thing about me this very minute.

What's the idea anyhow?

Let's all have a "redd up" time—and get cleared out and ready for a good, efficient, practical, honest, sure enough way of living.

What do you say?

MARRY-GO-ROUND

—By Helen Rowland—

Speaking Americanese

I am learning to speak the English language, all over again. I HAD to—in order to make myself understood. For English today is as different from pre-war English as today's corset is from the "old ironsides" of 1910.

Take that word "swell," for instance, which I was taught never, NEVER to use as a complimentary adjective. Yet, now, when I want to express enthusiasm or gratitude or admiration, there just isn't any other word in all the dictionary, which seems to fit my feelings like "SWELL!"

Nearly a decade ago, I stopped saying that I had an "engagement" and started calling any old thing, from a party to an appointment with the hairdresser, a "heavy date" and discarded "personality" in favor of "It." Also, temptress and siren became "vamp," and a woman-charmer became a "sheik." And almost everything became a "line."

Just at that psychological moment, Walter Winchell started in to make Webster's face red and to startle Roget's ghost out of its dreams, by inventing new words faster than we could say them. I struggled hard to resist the new influence, but finally fell. The purists have gone the way of the Puritans—and now, who cares?

Somehow, it seems so much less indelicate to say that "the Joneses are "bassinetting" than to whisper that they are "expecting." And "a new heart" is so much more comprehensive and indefinite than a fiancee or a "flame" or a "sweetie."

The big war gave us lots of new words and expressions, such as "camouflage" and "buddy" and that priceless retort, "Sez YOU!" Also the flapper, the racketeer, the bootlegger, the debutante and the "collegiate" wits each added another string of popular slang, to what we fondly call our "English vocabulary."

The flapper worked hard to revolutionize the dictionary, but did not succeed in making much of an impression. "Laugh that off" and "mad money" seem to have been her two most notable achievements. And, when the racketeer has passed into oblivion, his slang will pass with him.

* * *

That's the sad part of getting fond of a popular slang expression. By the time you have "come to know it well—and LOVE it, it is sure to die." And you DO miss it so!

Nothing will ever console me for the passing of the word "sheik." NOTHING will ever take its place as the perfect description of a certain type of handsome-but-dumb Don Juan.

And when that priceless and unparalleled expression of skepticism, irony and scorn — "OH YEAH?"—becomes only a memory, I shall feel that it is time to retire and take the veil.

I still speak the English language—oh yeah? But it isn't the same language I spoke 10 or 15 years ago. It's much less ladylike—and SO much more colorful!

Isn't It So?

The door of opportunity doesn't always open to those who keep knocking.

A financier is a man who can successfully float a loan during a depression.

Many people seem to have given up trying to live beyond their neighbor's means.

Some girls are the picture of health, and leave it to them to know how to paint the picture.

A man ought to live his life so that he can look back on the milestones and not think of them as millstones.

Text for Today Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.—Matthew, vii:12.

Human Side of the News

The Stage Careers of E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe—Both Great Artists

By Edwin C. Hill

MOONLIGHT FLOODS the ruined columns of ancient Luxor on the Nile. It casts radiance upon the figure of a woman whose great, dark eyes are gazing into westward space. Julia Marlowe, perhaps the greatest of American actresses, walks in loneliness, missing the companionship of that other supreme artist, her late husband, Edward H. Sothern.

Death cast its pall over one of the great romances of the stage when it removed E. H. Sothern from this life. For 40 years Miss Marlowe's glorious voice gave rich and vivid life to the lines of Shakespeare. But it was her that the world went to see and hear, even more than to take delight in the deathless art of the Bard of Avon.

Born in England, she was brought to America by her mother. Young Sarah Frances Frost drudged about a Cincinnati boarding house and read Shakespeare as she mopped the floors and swept the stodgy rooms. An actress perceived the fire of genius in the boarding house slavey, brought her East and trained her in the deportment of the stage. It was only a question of time and an engagement. From the first, Sarah Frost's rare voice and personal loveliness never failed to enchant.

Starred In Romantic Roles

AND MR. SOTHERN . . . for 50 years he trod the boards in great romantic roles. Until his death he retained the charm and freshness and youthfulness of spirit which never seems to abandon the truly great ones of the theater. His father was a noted actor, and Mr. Sothern was born in New Orleans. Old-time theatergoers still glow with pleasure at the recollection of Edward H. Sothern in "The Highest Bidder," "If I Were King," "The Three Musketeers" and "The Adventures of Lady Ursula."

He began to star with Miss Marlowe in 1904 and married her in 1911. "Hamlet," "Macbeth," "The "Taming of the Shrew," "The Merchant of Venice" and "Romeo and Juliet" placed them upon the throne of Shakespearean art.

The thoughts of this writer go back to that night in May, seven years ago, when he attended their farewell to the stage, at the Shubert Theater, in New York. The play was "If I Were King," and the words spoken before the curtain by Mr. Sothern still ring in memory.

"It is said that when the heart is full the tongue speaks," said Mr. Sothern. "But it will be difficult for me, with a heart overflowing with gratitude, to find words. When for 37 years a man has followed a calling he loves, in a community intelligent, tolerant, discriminating, eager and appreciative, and I had the extreme good fort to secure and retain favor his labor during all those y there is little more he ca mand of the gods.

"But as Miss Marlowe stand here tonight and your hands across the lights, we feel that we fought with enthusiasm noble cause. This retireme ours is not leadi-- to inglo ease. The gods will find s service still for idle hands to An- ow, ladies and gen men, -odby. We who have to win your affections many years have fallen cessity into our own snare in tendering our gratitu tell you of our love. I many moons of appreciati help, of solace and applau thank you with grateful a overflowing hearts."

Few Believed They Would Retire

AN AUDIENCE made up of the best in New York stood in loving tribute to listen to these words, but few were those who actually believed that the loveliest of all Juliets would actually retire, with her incomparable Romeo; that gone were their wonderful performances in "Hamlet," "Twelfth Night" and "The Taming of the Shrew," "As You Like It" and "The Merchant of Venice." Yet retire they did, hand in hand as they had faced the audience, and for years, until just the other day when death claimed Mr. Sothern, they wandered about the world, happy as newlyweds.

Bob Davis tells me of meeting them last spring in Florence. He told them they reminded him of Beatrice and Dante Allighieri who, too, strolled that way, hand in hand, 700 years ago.

"In spite of which," replied Sothern, "I should not care to be Dante, nor would I exchange my Julia for his Beatrice."

And I take it that one born in 1859 who can make a speech like that without a rehearsal was indeed a happy man.

U. S. Recognition Debated For Salvador and Cuba

By James T. Williams, Jr.

RESUMPTION of normal diplomatic relations with Russia, after a break that lasted 16 years, leaves El Salvador and Cuba as the only two foreign governments now in power which have not yet been recognized by the United States.

Refusal to recognize the government of El Salvador is due to the fact that the President now in power, Gen. Maximiliano H. Martinez, seized control of the government by force of arms on March 1, 1931.

Because the Central American republics during the Secretaryship of State of Mr. Hughes signed a treaty which pledges them not to recognize Central American government that comes to power by force of arms, the United States follows the same practice regarding Central America. It approves the treaty without having signed it.

As was pointed out by Mr. Stimson several years before he became Secretary of State, "Such a mutual covenant not to recognize a revolutionary government did not get at the root of the evil. So long as the custom of government controlled elections continued revolution offered the only means of deposing the party in control of the government. Under existing conditions, revolution was an essential part of the system, and to forbid revolution simply tended to perpetuate the power of the party or individual who happened to be in control of the government."

Mr. Stimson was writing of Nicaragua when he said this, but his observations apply with equal force to the other republics of Central America.

Liberal Policy Is Advocated

NOW would be an excellent time, in the opinion of more than one sympathetic student of Latin American affairs, for President Roosevelt to restore traditional American policy by extending recognition to the government now in power at El Salvador on terms as liberal as those on which normal relations with Russia have just been resumed.

As for Cuba, the situation in Havana is of much more importance to this country. It is also more difficult to handle. President Roosevelt is believed to be extremely desirous of finding recognition of the government at Havana headed by President Grau San Martin before Congress reconvenes on the third day of the new year.

Unless the Grau government has been recognized before Congress comes into session there will be a demand in the Senate for an investigation of the whole Cuban situation, and the Roosevelt Administration may find it difficult to block such a move.

Ambassador Welles is now the target for an attack by adherents of President Grau San Martin. Naturally President Roosevelt is reluctant to withdraw Ambassador Welles while he is under fire. The President's friendship for Mr. Welles, as well as his concern for American prestige, have doubtless prompted his insistence that Mr. Welles should return to his post and remain there until an ex-charge of Ambassadors can be effected with the minimum friction.

Sympathizes With Grau Objectives

RECOGNITION of the Cuban government now in power would clear the way for the holding either of a constitutional convention to elect a provisional president, pending the adoption of a new constitution, or of a general election under whatever constitution can be resurrected for that purpose.

The fact that the Roosevelt administration is heartily in sympathy with many of the objectives of President Grau San Martin makes it all the more important that normal relations between the countries shall be resumed as soon as possible. Only in this way can the Washington government go to the assistance of the Cuban people and aid them in reorganizing their economic life and in bringing order out of chaos in their financial affairs.

If President Roosevelt and President Grau San Martin could engage in direct conversations, as did Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Litvinoff, it is probable that American recognition could be extended as a Christmas gift to Cuba.

Resumption of normal relations with El Salvador and Cuba before Christmas would tremendously strengthen the position of the United States in the Pan-American Conference which convenes at Montevideo next month.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

—By Aline Michaelis—

Serenade

So softly speaks the flute across the night,
So lightly lies the moonbeam on the rose,
The lily-petals are so misty white,
The south wind with such fair fragrance goes,
That, though some whisper this summer hour
Must, love, to you across your casement creep,
It will not stir your eyelids' closed-up flower
Nor for one heart-beat mar your tranquil sleep.

But may the music's haunting silver streams,
So faintly drifting on the moon-drenched air,
Intrigue your ear and mingle with your dreams
Until its love and longing linger there.
So through your years may all my worship be
Like these clear notes that to your slumber sing,
Unguessed, and yet enhance melody,
As each lark adds his joy unto the spring.
